

APPLE CROP OVER STATE IS BELOW YIELD LAST YEAR

PORTLAND, July 13 (AP)—The prospective pear crop in Oregon for 1933 is practically the same as was harvested last year, it was said today in the July 1 fruit report for Oregon, issued by the federal bureau of agricultural economics.

The present outlook for dried prunes in Western Oregon is poor, but the Eastern Oregon prune crop is faring somewhat better although much below a year ago, the report stated.

The extremely spotted prospects in the various fruit sections of Oregon are mainly the result of a very late and backward season following a severe winter during which a considerable amount of injury occurred, especially in the early fruits, the report said.

Peaches Damaged
Apricots and peaches were probably damaged by the winter cold more than other fruits over the state as a whole.

A heavy drop of cherry blossoms in June and a failure to set, with a July reported condition of only 62 proved earlier fears of considerable winter damage were well founded.

"This is an off-season in our principal apple producing sections," the report said, "and taking this into consideration, present prospects are above average. Early varieties are sizing up satisfactorily, and probably the only real need is for more warm weather."

Apple Production
Apple production for 1933 in Oregon is estimated at 4,630,000 bushels, compared with 4,950,000 bushels last year.

Pears, 2,812,000 bushels against 2,808,000.
Peaches, 230,000 bushels against 348,000.
Grapes, 2,331,000 tons against 2,640,000.

Prunes, fresh, 20,000,000 tons against 36,000,000 last year, including some quantities not harvested because of our markets.

Prunes, for drying, 20,000,000 tons, same as last year.
Cherries, 11,900,000 tons, against 12,025,000 in 1932.
