It was a social meeting and some of the members brought their work while others brought only to enjoy the lovely park. It was cool and comfortable and everyone there had a splendid time. Mrs. Ed Jasper, president conducted the short business meeting and for the devotionals, Mrs. Sherwood Williams led in some appropriate hymns. Edna and Jean Jasper repeated the 19th Psalm and Mary Jasper gave the call to prayer followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. The company, 20 adults and a group of children, were seated at one long table with vases of garden flowers for decorations, when cooling refreshments were served by the hostesses. The next meeting will be the second Thursday in August with Mrs. Jessie Fisher, Mrs. Pausta Tyler and Mabel Morton as hostesses.

4-H club premium lists for the Oregon State Fair, Sept. 4-9 may be had by writing to H. C. Seymour, superintendent of 4-H club department, Corvallis, Ore.

Recognizing the importance of 4-H club boys and girls as exhibitors at the State Fair, the State Fair is offering $2,500 in premiums and scholarships in the 4-H club department. In the separate 4-H club premium list obtainable from Mr. H. C. Seymour. In addition to the $2,500 in premiums offered, the State Fair is paying to the state 4-H club organization $1,100 for the payment of all expenses connected with the 4-H club work at the fair. This sum will be disbursed directly by H. C. Seymour, superintendent, 4-H club department, but premiums will be paid by the fair direct.

No free passes are printed this year, and 4-H club members will pay the regular admission charge which is reduced to 25 cents per day, or $1.00 per week, but 4-H club exhibitors are accorded special privileges of exemption from the payment of any entry fees, and all other pay rent.

And furthermore, to show 4-H club boys and girls the direct result of the buy-as-you-go plan, and no free gate admissions, the State Fair will add a bonus of 25 per cent to each premium check when issued. This is above and in addition to the amount offered in the premium list. To make possible this extra payment of a 25 per cent bonus on all 4-H premiums, everyone connected with 4-H club exhibits as exhibitors, employees, or otherwise will pay the regular reduced admission charge. This loyal support of the fair by all those connected with the 4-H club makes possible, in return, the State Fair's support of 4-H club work without the usual state appropriation.

What the State Fair Does for 4-H Club Members:

$2,500 cash in premiums and scholarships offered, plus a 25 per cent bonus above that.

$1,100 cash to cover all 4-H club expenses, and in addition to the $1,100 the State Fair pays:

Maintenance, light and water in the five 4-H club buildings, together with the first bedding of straw in the livestock exhibit buildings.

No pen rent or stall fees paid by 4-H exhibitors.

No entry fees paid by 4-H exhibitors.

No free passes to anyone connected with the 4-H club department. It takes the 25-cent pieces of the fair's funds to pay bills like the above.

SERVING SMORGASBORD STYLE

For summer night supper entertaining, try the friendly Swedish Smorgasbord custom. It will fit into any type of entertaining facilities and is simple, appetizing, and well liked by guests. When the time for food comes the guests are led to a table filled with interesting "makings" and are invited to butter their own and to help themselves to anything and everything that appeals to their eyes and appetites.

Everything on the Smorgasbord can be prepared in advance from the celery to the cheese tray, cheese, by the way, is the big drawing card of this help-yourself arrangement. Usually several varieties are used, including a mild American cheese, a bit of Roquefort and perhaps a jar of Limburger or Tilsiters for those preferring a truly nippy cheese. These different cheeses may be arranged with their interesting colors and shapes on a tray, with dried fruits for garnish or a separate bowl or plate for each cheese may be used.

Several kinds of dark bread — rye, wholewheat and pumpernickel or crisp crackers and curled celery, sliced tomatoes, a bowl of lettuce leaves or any other fresh vegetables comprise the Smorgasbord. A large platter of milk with a glass for every one should be at the end of the table, or if the evening is cool or chilly, a hot drink should be provided.

Ore. Pears Are High In Vitamins

High vitamin content of Oregon pears and the presence in this fruit of the rare levulose sugar has been revealed in research carried on at the Oregon Medical school and Oregon State college on a co-operative basis with the Oregon-Washington pear bureau.

In a recent report of this work, Henry Hartman, horticulturist, with the bureau and stationed at Corvallis, reported that preliminary findings are promising, but that much work remains to be done before the extent of their importance can be determined.

The investigation of the vitamin content of winter pears was made by Dr. Ira M. Manville, associate professor of physiology at the Oregon Medical school at Portland. He found that the Winter Nella variety was particularly high in vitamin C content and that winter pears in general compare favorably with oranges in this regard.

Intensive work on the chemical content of pears has been carried on by J. C. Moore at Oregon State college. He has established definitely the presence of levulose sugar in the pear, the only form of sugar tolerated by the system of those persons afflicted by diabetes. He has not yet worked out any practical method of extracting it in quantities, however.

Levulose now commands an exceptionally high market price, ranging up to $25 a pound because of the difficulty in extracting it. Recent reports are, however, that an Iowa scientist has found a way of refining it from Jerusalem artichokes at a cost of only a few cents a pound. Mr. Moore is now in the middle of investigating this report and related matters pertaining to possible recovery of levulose from pears.

Whether pears, as such, or whether a fruit syrup made from them will be of special value to diabetics remains to be determined, says Professor Hartman.

It is hoped that by continuing this work much valuable information for both producers and consumers of pears will be developed, as past investigation of the food value of pears has been unusually meager.

HOW TO MAKE FOOD MORE ATTRACTIVE

By ANNA ROOSEVELT DALL

WERE you ever homesick for a food? Did you ever, in your mind's eye, try to "look up" a fragrant flavor memory? Even when miles away from the Old Dominion, did you ever find yourself homesick for the air and the mouth waters for some of those mahogany crusted, deeply pink slices of Virginia ham so dearly prized by those who know it? It is so difficult to describe to anyone unacquainted with it, but it is so inclined to scoff at food raptures.

Very probably, like ripe olives and shad roe and dozens of other good things, the taste is acquired, but once eaten you are forever enthusiastic. The famous Smithfield section of Virginia is noted for a particularly fine ham flavor and to make this delicacy readily obtainable, without purchasing a whole ham, when the flavor homesickness is upon you, the ham, ready chopped and deviled for extra flavor may be purchased in glass jars.

Ham flavor just seems to belong in a picnic menu. The ham sandwich has become the classic of the lunch box, the picnic basket, the camper's kit and the estate motor hamper. Chopped and deviled ham is always easier to eat and certainly goes farther in sandwiches than sliced ham. Deviled Smithfield ham is rich enough in its own sweet delicious fat to make butter unnecessary. It is piquant enough to use alone or sufficiently flavored to be mixed with other materials, crunchy crisp celery or cucumber, minced sweet pickles, chopped watercress and, of course, mayonnaise, for example.

Thin sliced Virginia ham canapés or ham sandwiches, served before dinner as for a first course will challenge the most fastidious palates.

As many new and interesting and easy-to-use foods as one can have in the pantry or refrigerator. These additional suggestions will keep your summer guests impressed with your talents as a hostess:

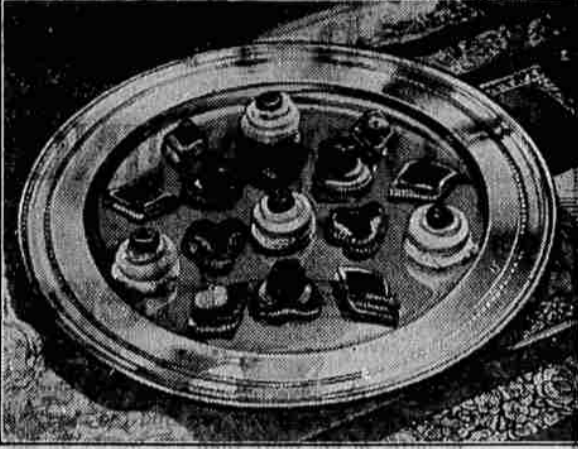

Blend deviled ham paste with enough mayonnaise to easily spread. Spread on canapés biscuits or crisp crackers. Dot with a bit of mayonnaise.

Place thin slices of crisp, cold cucumber or tomato on toast rounds. Garnish with mayonnaise and slices of stuffed olives.

Roll stuffed olives in deviled ham paste blended with enough mayonnaise to make it stick. Place each rolled olive on a crisp biscuit, spread lightly with mayonnaise.

Then, of course, a bit of caviar or a few plain olives, or some stuffed celery add to the zest of the food and the pep of the party.

For stuffing celery, blend mayonnaise with equal quantities of cream cheese and Roquefort cheese.

CANAPES may be made quickly and at the same time attractively appetizing

News-Sentinel's Edition Recalls Fort Wayne Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the first issue of the Fort Wayne, Indiana, Sentinel came from the press July 4, 1883, its big news of the day was drawn from tapes and trading posts as well as from palace homes of the frontier community.

That was the start of a hundred years of publication, the completion of which July 4 this year was marked for observance by the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel in the city that grew from the fort colony of 800 people.

The first circuit court of the district embracing the little town that called itself the "gateway to the west" had been meeting for several years when Sentinel reporters — or maybe it was just a reporter — began to print the news.

Murder by Permission

Just about that time the small outpost was upset by a murder case, arising from a custom which permitted Indians to kill one another, according to tribal laws.

But one murderer seemed to stretch the point too far, and the citizens of the town called for a Miami Indian chief, into the county jail.

It seems that a woman slave, half negro and half Indian, had been slipping into the home of Big Leg and stealing meat. He threatened to kill her the next time she did it.

She ignored his threat, stole some more meat, and then fled to work for a family in the fort. Big Leg sought her out where she was hanging up clothes at a spot where Clinton and Columbia streets were finally laid out. There he killed her, explaining to the irate citizens that she "was his anyway."

He was sentenced to hang, and asked to be shot. Finally he got a prison sentence, and later was pardoned.
