'Worry-Weigher' Newest Wrinkle In Bed Making

By Howard W. Blakelee
(Associated Press Science Editor)
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—A bed which can weigh a puff of air is revealing obscure sources of unrest to observers at the Yale University Institute of Human Relations.

The bed records the minute-by-minute loss in weight of persons asleep, or resting quietly while awake. This is called the "insensible loss," due mostly to loss of water through the breath and evaporation from the skin. Such loss is normal for all persons.

Rate of Loss Varies
The weight of a 150-pound man drops an average of about an ounce to an ounce and a half an hour. But the bed reveals that this rate of loss is not steady. The fluctuations bring to light hidden emotional disturbances.

The weighing bed is set up in the laboratory of physiological psychology, which is under the direction of Dr. Walter R. Miles, professor of psychology at the Yale school of medicine. It is a cot, suspended by a chain like a scale pan. The bed will register weight changes of one part in a million. One of the sleepers was a man troubled with outbreaks of restlessness. He would grasp his head with both hands, rolling from side to side, muttering.

At the beginning of sleep his weight loss was two grams or about one-fourteenth of a pound, every four or five minutes. But during seizures this loss mounted to two grams a minute, temporarily at the rate of a quarter pound an hour. The loss would show a sharp decline right after a seizure, as if his body had relieved itself of some strong tension. When he slept in the daytime, his drop in weight was even slower than in any night period, as if he was then free from some fear that usually pestered him at night. A possible explanation of the restlessness was found in one of his business habits. For years he had the responsibility of opening a business office early and on time. But he used no alarm clock. Instead he relied wholly on his "unfailing ability" to awaken on time. This inner tension evidently caused many needless awakenings during the night.

The weighing method in the psychological laboratory furnished an objective analysis of this obscure human difficulty.

Russians Plan Stratospheric Attempt Soon

LENINGRAD (AP)—Soviet aviation's first venture into the stratosphere is scheduled to be made within the next few weeks in a specially constructed balloon designed for an ascent of from six to 13 miles.

Three—possibly four—of the country's leading aerologists intend to set out on a voyage into the upper reaches of the atmosphere before the summer ends on what is contemplated as the first of a series of such flights for scientific observation.

To Study Cosmic Rays
Their primary purpose is to study the cosmic rays, electro-magnetic phenomena and the physiological influence of great heights on human beings. But they also hope to better the record of Prof. Auguste Piccard, who on his second ascent reached a height of more than 53,000 feet.

The first test flight of the balloon, constructed in the air institute's factories here along the general lines of Piccard's craft, was pronounced satisfactory by the constructor, M. Vansenko and B. Fedosenko, the chief pilot, although it was allowed to climb only 3,100 meters during its almost 14 hours in the air. It was brought down safely some 30 miles from Leningrad, its starting point.

Molchanov Likely Commander
Both Vansenko and Fedosenko probably will make the first flight. Prof. D. Molchanov, director of the institute and organizer of the ascent, likely will be in command.

Whether the flight will be started from Leningrad or from Moscow will depend on weather conditions.

from Leningrad or from Moscow will depend on weather conditions. The balloon, designed by Engineer I. Chertovsky, was more than a year in construction and only Soviet materials and equipment were used. The envelope is made of special rubberized fabric to which a paint compound has been applied to make it impervious to the sun's heat. It has a capacity of 20,000 cubic meters of hydrogen gas.

Basket Type Suspension
The cabin is constructed of non-magnetic, rustless steel and can accommodate four men for a minimum of 12 hours. It is slung in what resembles a basket, the bottom of which is fitted with a shock-absorbing device to soften the impact of landing. Parachutes fitted with non-sweating and non-freezing glass—four around the sides, one in the top and one in the floor—provide the means of observation and photography.

The crew will receive necessary air from a liquid oxygen apparatus within the sealed cabin, which also will have a powerful short-wave radio transmission and receiving set.

PLAN ORIENTAL ECONOMIC PARLEY

MANILA, P. I. (AP)—Alexander Hume Ford, director of the Pan-Pacific Union, has launched here a plan for an oriental economic conference similar to the London parley. He proposes that China, Japan, Siam, India, Australia and the Philippines send delegates to Baguio, a Philippine mountain resort.

While an Atlanta drug store clerk slept in the building as night watchman, burglars entered, stole his trousers, watch and $34 in cash.
