wound up at the city hall where loud speakers broadcast a telephoned speech by Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator. He congratulated the city on the fact that 29-113 firms, employing 250,210 persons have signed up.

The Ford Motor company was not represented in the parade, for it has not yet accepted the automobile code or given any indication of its attitude. A short time before the parade started, however, the company announced that between 3,000 and 4,000 men had been recalled to work on a 40-hour week basis with pay of 50 cents an hour for an 8-hour day. The automotive code provides for a maximum of 35 hours a week and a minimum of 43 cents an hour.
