BOXING REVIVING HERE

La Grande and valley people who enjoy the ancient art of fist fighting—it's boxing nowadays, of course—had an interesting evening here Labor day when a first class card was staged under the auspices of the American Legion by Leo McCarthy and Martin Fitzgerald.

Of course, many people do not care for boxing, but for those who derive entertainment from this branch of sport, the Labor day fight was a signal that boxing is in for a revival locally. It has been many years since such an interesting, clean and entertaining boxing card was staged here, and those who admire fighters regard it as a positive indication that more of its kind will be enjoyed during the fall and winter months.

One thing is evident. There are a large number of people here who would patronize such a sporting event if they can be assured that the bouts are honest and the pugilists well matched. Promoters McCarthy and Fitzgerald took a long step toward rebuilding fan confidence in boxing here with their latest endeavor, and they are to be congratulated.

Football interest was quickened here this week with the return to La Grande of Coach Bob Quinn, of the Normal school, and Coach Ira Woodie, of the La Grande High school. It set the fans to thinking—that it won't be long now until the thud of toe against pigskin is heard. And, best of all, both coaches are hopeful of having a winning team on the field this year, assuring La Grande of some unquestionably good games.

The emergency legislation is producing a flock of jobs for some folks and it is to be hoped that they pass the benefits down the line.

Most people are very pleasant as long as you don't try to collect.

In Washington

By Herbert Plummer
WASHINGTON — Now that the "new deal" has emerged victorious in its first court test, one of the most important and significant phases of the new administration's program has been reached.

It was something worth watching when the oil refiners of Texas came into the District of Columbia supreme court attacking the industrial recovery act and asking that it be set aside. Here was a test of one of the most weighty problems that have arisen since adoption of the constitution itself.

The refiners complained that the president is exercising powers which must be exercised by congress alone. And when their counsel was asked by the presiding justice whether he thought the act was based on vested powers over interstate commerce or power given to the federal government to meet emergency conditions, he answered flatly:

"The act can't be sustained on any grounds."
Then The Court Spoke
But the court, it has developed, indicated that it holds a contrary view, by deciding that laws, "including the constitution, should be read in emergencies in the light of the law of necessity."

The final decision, of course, and one which might mean that the program of the "new deal" will either stand or fall—rests with the supreme court of the nation.
It is highly doubtful whether the supreme court will make a decision on the new laws any time soon. It's almost physically impossible. The court has adjourned until October. With the facilities the justices have at their disposal it would seem almost impossible for decisions affecting the "new deal" to be handed down during the next session which comes to a close in May, 1934.

Necessity Or Precedent
The philosophy of the court as it is now constituted and as it has been revealed in decisions seems to many observers to be liberal. Even without the presence of Oliver Wendell Holmes on the bench this appears true.
While no one can predict what will happen to the new laws when they reach the court, some believe this will play a prominent part.

Meanwhile, speculation continues as to whether the important governmental changes made by the new administration are to be passed upon finally by justices having their eyes on present conditions and not wholly on precedents. In this connection the District of Columbia decision is certain to be pointed to as significant.

Have you given your best, my brother
In the struggle of life today?
Have you helped some weary traveler
As he went on his weary way?

In the world's broad field of battle
Have you given your best, I say?
As you toiled in the day's fierce battle
Did you give of your best today?

Have you given your best, my brother
To make the world safe today?
Did you carry the load of the weaker
As he trudged along the way?

Then give of your best, my brother
That the world may be freed from strife.
And the Master will give you later
A happy, eternal life. (JHB)

La Grande's Most Popular Products

Wherever you go you will find Meadow Harvest Butter and Ucoco Eggs. Such popularity is not undeserved. In the few years that these two necessary food products have been on the market, they have gained such a wide reputation for always being one of the best that can be had. Join the throngs that are using them . . . you, too, will soon be singing their praises.

MMES. HUNTER AND HOOD ENTERTAIN

WALLOWA (Special) — Mrs. C. A. Hunter and Mrs. Ross Hood entertained a small group of friends at a one o'clock bridge luncheon at the home of the former Wednesday afternoon.

Lovely yellow double nasturtiums and yellow tapers formed the centerpiece for the table at which the ten members of the party were seated. Following the luncheon hour, two tables were arranged for bridge. Mrs. Margaret McDonald, of Los Angeles, Cal., received the prize for high score.

Guests for the informal afternoon were: Mesdames Lawrence Prizell, E. W. Purr, J. E. Gregory, Margaret McDonald, Chas. Hauptreich, Edwin Marvin, George E. Dale and C. A. McClaran.

TODAY IN BRIEF, IN AND AROUND OREGON

AS CHRONICLED BY THE DAILY LEASED WIRE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NO TRACE OF MISSING MEN
PORTLAND, Sept. 7 (AP)—No trace of three men missing on the snow-covered, storm-bashed slopes of Mount Jefferson since Monday had been found by searchers, they reported this morning after an unceasing search for 24 hours over the area in which the trio are believed lost.

The three missing are John Thomas, Davis McCamant and Don Burkhardt, all of Portland. The searching party, organized in Portland Tuesday night, planned to set out immediately in a renewed effort to find the lost men.

C. C. C. MEN REELIST
ROSEBURG, Ore., Sept. 7 (AP)—The Wolf Creek C. C. C. camp, located on Little river, 35 miles east of Roseburg, which won the highest honors among C. C. C. camps of the 9th corps area, will remain practically intact throughout the winter, it was announced here today. Of the 228 men in the camp, all except 24 have signified their intention of reenlisting for the ensuing six months.

FATALLY INJURED
SALEM, Sept. 7 (AP)—A falling snag fatally injured Dale Monroe, 21, of McMaha, at a logging camp near Mill City late yesterday. He died soon afterward at a hospital in Mill City.

SHOOTING AT HEPPNER
PENDLETON, Ore., Sept. 7 (AP)—Lloyd Matteson of John Day was in a hospital at Heppner today with four bullet wounds in his body which police said he suffered in a shooting in a Heppner card room.

Bill Penland of Heppner, who the officers said fired at Matteson with an automatic pistol, was held in jail. Matteson's condition was reported by hospital attendants to be grave. The officers said they were told ill feeling had existed between the two.

Library Chats

By Mabel E. Doty, Librarian

The following interesting editorial, "Squaring the Circle" was printed in the Saturday Review of Literature for July 29, 1933:

"If the new economic dispensation has its way we shall have more hours of leisure in the future. How to make that leisure interesting without constant reliance upon external stimulus will be one of the problems of the future. Men will be forced again to rely upon their own resources for mental and spiritual satisfaction, upon friendship, and books, and home diversions.

"All the agencies of the home and the community that make for a richer and fuller life will need the most careful nursing, the most enlightened direction. For it is no use to bestow the boon of leisure upon society unless at the same time the means to its sane and constructive enjoyment is to be available. If leisure is to imply idleness and vacuity, then nothing will be gained from it. But if it is to mean opportunity for physical and mental improvement, there is no telling to what lengths it may bring our society in the course of time. It has frequently been said that the splendid achievements of classical days rested upon the fact that a slave class released time for intellectual pursuits to those more fortunately placed. Now we are within sight of a period when every individual should have leisure for the exercise of the mind. Who can tell what flowering of national literature, and art, and beauty in general the added hours of freedom may produce?"

The resources of the La Grande public library are for those who wish to use them for study and recreation. Students who are unable to continue their education are urged to do some systematic reading. A reading course on any subject in which the student may be interested will be compiled by the librarian. If sufficient material on the subject is lacking in the local library the books may be borrowed from the state library.

TWO VIOLENT DEATHS
WALDPOR, Ore., Sept. 7 (AP)—Warren Burtis, 46, once employed in the Oregon state highway engineer's office, apparently shot and killed his sister-in-law, Opal Gillespie, 35, Waldport High school teacher here last night, then turned the weapon upon himself, inflicting wounds that proved fatal, state police said following an investigation. Mrs. Burtis and two grown children were absent at the time of the tragedy.

The "least sacrificing" of all big leaguers this season seem to be Luke Appling, Jim Fox, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Pepper Martin, none of whom, up to mid-August, was credited a bunt.

Chats With Parents

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE
When two doctors disagree, they may both be right. This may sound contradictory, but it is true more often than most people appreciate.

A patient, for example, may be sick and one doctor may make a diagnosis of high blood pressure with kidney involvement, while another physician consulted in the same case may make a diagnosis of kidney disease with arterial involvement. In such a hypothetical example both physicians make the same diagnosis, but reverse the order of emphasis.

Of course, not all, not even the vast majority of disagreements in diagnosis or treatment can be reconciled so readily. At times they differ as much as black and white. But such extreme disagreements are much more rare than the average man in the street believes.

Though human anatomy and human physiology conform to a certain pattern common to all mortals, individuals do vary in their reactions so widely that few medical
