SOCIETY NOTES

Oregon Division of A. A. U. W. Offering Graduate Fellowship Of $1200, Local President Reports

The Oregon division of the American Association of University Women is offering this year a graduate fellowship of $1200 for the purpose of stimulating scholarship among women of the state, according to information received by Miss Jean White, president of the local branch, from Mrs. E. Ruth Rockwood, of Portland, chairman of the fellowship committee. Last spring the La Grande branch entertained the women of La Grande at a spring fashion tea to raise the quota for the fellowship fund.

The holder of the fellowship must be a woman resident of Oregon, a graduate of a standard college, but since the fund is to be used for education beyond the bachelor of arts degree, the committee will be especially thoughtful in choosing a woman who shows exceptional promise and who is capable of a program of constructive research work.
Members of the state committee on fellowship are Mrs. Virgil Earl, state president, of Eugene, ex-officio member, and one representative from the faculty of each of the four colleges approved by A. A. U. W., the University of Oregon, O. S. C. Reed college and Willamette university.
Miss Eleanor Vernon is fellowship chairman of the local branch.

Elks '49 Show To Be Held On October 18-21

Ten-gallon hats will come out of the moth balls in which they have been kept since last fall on Oct. 18, 19, 20 and 21 when the B. P. O. Elks stage their annual Days of '49 show at the Sacajawea Inn hall. The ballroom will again be arranged like an old-fashioned saloon with crap games, black jack and other games of chance arranged around the walls and a place for dancing in the center.
Jesse Andrews is chairman of the committee, assisted by C. L. Thompson, E. F. Walden, Foster Sims and Victor Eckley.
Proceeds from the Days of '49 show are used every year to carry out the philanthropic program of the lodge. The funds make possible the Christmas tree for children and the other activities during the Yuletide season.

THE LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE

The little red schoolhouse has been one of the most significant of all American landmarks for more than a century. It is part of the background of millions of Americans; it has been the starting post for many of the nation's most successful men; and it lives today in a halo of sentiment, a thing as indisputably and typically American as corn on the cob.

But Owen D. Young was quite right in his recent warning to the National Education association that we must bend every effort to getting the little red schoolhouse off of the scene.

The rural villages of the red schoolhouse's heyday, Mr. Young points out, were self-contained and self-supporting. They were islands, remote and isolated. The cultural life of the nation was centered in the cities; to the cities, consequently, went the ambitious and energetic young men as soon as the red schoolhouse had got through with him. Today the wind of change is blowing over the land. New economic conditions foreshadow a decentralization of industry, of population and of culture. The small town is due for a rebirth. The old barriers that isolated it have vanished forever.

But, says Mr. Young, "we will not get this change in country life without good schools. People will not move there or even stay there if the educational facilities for their children are inadequate. The schools are the key which will unlock the country for modern living."

All of this is perfectly true; and no one who has traveled through rural districts in recent years can fail to realize that a tremendous start has already been made in the right direction. The fine new schoolhouse is more and more becoming the cultural and architectural center about which the life of the small town is built. Many and many a town has spent more money than it could really afford to give its children the best schoolhouse possible.

That is a healthy trend. Our democracy must stand or fall by its educational system, and the demands which it will make on its schools in the immediate future will be greater than ever before. The little red schoolhouse, enormously useful as it has been, has outlived its day. The American scene will lose one of its dearest landmarks—but it will get something better to take its place.
