CREDIT HELD BIG NEED OF U. S. BUSINESS

a few months ago the east felt about the same as the mid-west does now.

The big thing which seems to be holding back increased business activity in the entire country appears to be the credit situation, Mr. Lanzer says. If that can be remedied so that the average business man can get some assistance, they're willing to go ahead and do things, he said, adding that everyone realizes that President Roosevelt understands the situation and that in the east they feel there will be definite assistance within a short time.

Concerning lumber, Mr. Lanzer points out that there has been a slight improvement, although not so much as was expected earlier in the year for this period. Perhaps a small amount of additional business was placed in September, he said, and the slight increase is encouraging to the industry.

"We feel that as more industries operate under the code we are hopeful that we will have a very gradual return to a normal business," Mr. Lanzer stated. "Just what normal will be remains to be seen—it depends largely upon the upbuilding of domestic demand. There can't be any spurt around the corner for any of us — it's not in the books."

Mr. and Mrs. Lanzer visited in Merrill, Bloomer and Madison, Wis. Milwaukee and saw the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago. They returned via Denver and Salt Lake City, and report a very enjoyable trip.

of the board, and that under his leadership, "strife, dissension and discord have prevailed on the board to an extent that is proving inimical to the best interests of Oregon's institutions of higher learning."

This demand for Starr's resignation occurred one week after a board meeting here at which a general verbal disturbance took place when E. C. Bammona, chairman of the board's financial committee, accused Starr of neglecting to provide other members of the board with an audit report of certain departments of the State college, made by the secretary of state.

Persons close to Starr said it appeared to be a foregone conclusion the chairman would refuse to resign and that he would demand a hearing on the governor's charges. The governor had previously indicated he would favor this step.

TASK OF THE NEW GENERATION

The era that is beginning these days is to be a great time for young men, believes Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton. Getting us out of the mess we are in now will be, ultimately, the job of the younger generation, he says.

Dean Gauss expressed this viewpoint at Cincinnati the other day.

"The impressions of men over 40 cannot be changed," he said. "They have built their lives on a plan evolved when they were in their 20s. When they come face to face with a changing social order, such as we are facing today, they are helpless. They must lean upon the younger generation."

"The men of my generation received their training in the '90s. Success in those days meant following the example of certain great men. The great men were millionaires."

"Where have our examples gone today? Many of them have lost their fortunes, their positions. They are powerless to adapt themselves to the new order in which the millionaire has vanished as an ideal."

That a new viewpoint and a new set of ideals are urgently required in the present time of change is indisputable. We shall have to evolve them as we go along, for the most part, and before we get through a good many of us of the older generation are likely to find ourselves pretty badly confused; but all in all it should be a time of great hope and great opportunity.

For we are not simply engaged in getting the wheels moving again and starting people back to work. To do those things it is necessary for us to re-orient ourselves completely, to find, as Dean Gauss says, new leaders and new standards. The job will take a generation or more; but it will prove one of the most worthwhile jobs we have ever tackled.

That is why the young man who is just ready to begin his career today is to be envied. To be sure, he faces a perplexed and blinded world; jobs are pitifully scarce; it will not be easy for him to find a chance to exercise his talents. But in the long run he will have reason to bless the fate that brought him to manhood just at this time.

The world will call on him for the very best he has to give. If he is man enough to grasp it, it will offer him an opportunity dazzling in its size.

HENRY C. HOCKE FUNERAL FRIDAY

The meeting places in the different localities will be the K of P. hall at Elgin, the Masonic hall at Summerville, K of P. hall, Imbler, elevator office at Allport, the John Schroeder home at Island City, the city hall at Covey, the M. and M. office, North Powder, L. Z. Terrill's office at Union, and the county agent's office at La Grande.

E. H. DeLong is chairman of the county allotment board, assisted by Tom Wallinger, of Alice, and Merrill Conley.

Question Answered
The question arose yesterday as to whether the owner of a farm would have to sign when the land is held under contract of sale in that case, it was pointed out, the owner signs and also the man who sold the land and holds the contract.

The answer to various other questions were secured at a meeting of county agents and extension service representatives at Pendleton with Mr. Mumford, of the bureau of agricultural economics at Washington, D. C. One of the things taken up there was the use of contracted acreage. Previously, letters and dispatches from J. F. Cox, who is in charge of the crops part of the wheat administration work, indicated that land may be used for other crops when taken out of wheat production.

That Mr. Mumford pointed out, is not the case. The administration recently decided that no crops that can be marketed shall be grown on the contracted acreage. However, Union county is particularly fortunate in its situation relative to the reduction.

Many farmers escape from the practice of growing spring wheat for growing winter wheat and summer fallow the land on alternate years. Acreage may then be reduced to comply with the contract. Others may grow alfalfa, sweet clover and pasture grass. The first year in which such are seeded counts as land out of production. On the second, however, a different area of land must be retired
