SOME INTERESTING "ODDS AND ENDS" FROM WASHINGTON

By Byron Price
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

And it all comes under the head of news:

SILENT PARTNER: To administration politicians, the most surprising thing about Vice President Garner's withdrawal from public view is that he hasn't even taken the trouble to send out word what patronage, if any, he wants.

HUEY: If the grapevine tidings from top-notched Democratic circles can be trusted, that punching administered Senator Long at a New York club party isn't a circumstance to what is about to hit him and his party organization in Louisiana from the direction of Washington.

ANGEL WANTED: One potent reason Republicans headquarters in Washington is so silent, in contrast to the loud drum-beatings of the Democrats after their defeat in 1928, is that no cash backer has appeared with money bags comparable to those opened to the Democratic resuscitators four years ago by John J. Raskob.

NEWEST DEAL: There are signs that one or two other figures almost as well known as Prof. Raymond Moley may go west into the magazine or some other private occupation before the Roosevelt administration is a year old; and that doesn't mean Secretary Woodin, who really is ill and can leave or stay as he desires.

ACTION: It has just been disclosed that some weeks ago General Johnson himself, at a hastily called conference of his assistants at the NRA, laid down the law in characteristic cuss-words to one or two who had been bottling up news about the public business.

REVOLUTION: In these days when a senator has to get into a fist-fight to make page one, who remembers the time when most of the thrum in Washington emanated from senatorial throats, whether congress was in session or not?

COLLISION: One reason the public works prosperity drive hasn't been faster in getting started is that many contractors are afraid to bid on construction jobs with the price of materials jumping under the urge of the NRA prosperity drive.

SERIOUS: Extract from form letters sent out by the Tennessee Valley Authority inquiring about an applicant for a job:

"We are interested in knowing what evidence he has given of public spirit and social mindedness. In what activities has he engaged which were primarily in the public interest and not for financial and personal profit? Please be specific."

Introduction of the new Fall Coats follow the lines of the straight and narrow. They are severely straight in line with a slimming silhouette topped by a fluffy collar or bands of fur trimming.

Boucle wools are the fabrics although suede finish wools are smart and ribbed fabrics are equally important. Wool crepes are conservative but a smart choice for dress coats and lend themselves well to either long or short fur.

Fur collars are of Lapin - Marmink - Manchurian Wolf - Fox and Caracul. All go well with the colors of Black, Brown and Green—the predominating shades in the new styles.
