dog racing from 2 1/2 to 10 per cent estimated to raise $500,000, was agreed upon. The committee decided to recommend another change in the license fees for automobiles, placed on a flat $5 a year basis by the last legislature. The new proposal is for a graduated automobile license fee which takes into consideration age and value of the machine. This is expected to yield $500,000 for unemployment relief. It was further recommended that state highway bonds be issued to finance work relief in event other revenue measures fail to meet the need, the bonds to be retired by revenues from liquor taxes. Other revenue measures authorized included: A tax on prize fights, wrestling matches and similar exhibitions; amendment of the state income tax law to confine offsets and losses to the current year in which the tax is reported, raising $100,000; amendment of the intangible and excise tax laws by cutting exemptions to 50 per cent of the present amount, to yield $100,000 repeal of the bill passed by the last legislature thereby returning accounts receivable to be classified as personal property; provision for a nominal severance tax on timber, ore, oil and rock from quarries; provision for installment payment of taxes. In addition there will be "a vigorous but inoffensive campaign for payment of taxes."
