

IDAHOANS FAVOR CONSTRUCTION OF I-O-N HIGHWAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Favored by Idahoans as cutting 700 miles from the distance between their fields and California markets, the Idaho-Oregon-Nevada cut-off to provide a north-south main highway for district between the Cascade and Rocky mountains, is being urged by Senator Pope (D., Idaho) and T. A. Walters, first assistant secretary of the interior.

At present it was explained at Senator Pope's office, Idaho shippers must send their crops either across Washington or Oregon to the coast and thence to California. This not only delays reaching the market but increases shipping costs "to the detriment of the inland shippers."

The road, it was said, would cut the distance between Idaho fields and California markets approximately in half.

A great amount of the highway has been constructed by the various states, but it was pointed out, it can be completed to extend from the Canadian border to Mexico for approximately $1,500,000.

As outlined at the senator's office by Walters, the road would follow U. S. highway No. 95 which ends at Walsey, through Idaho. Under the senator's plan it would be extended through Eastern Oregon down the Jordan valley, thence through Nevada and into California.

Oregon coast interests, it was explained, have offered an alternate route through Crane, Oregon, to connect the Portland road and thence south into California. Engineers were quoted as saying the route via Portland would cost approximately $2,000,000, or $700,000 more than the inland route and would save but little mileage.

The proposed highway would tap an irrigated area of Idaho in which between $22,000,000 and $25,000,000 has been spent by the reclamation service, Walters said, and in addition would give another outlet to Montana wheat and livestock producers.

It is white with two crushed girdles, one white, one black. The long, loose-hanging sleeves are made of the black satin.

Cake catastrophes more often result from baking in too hot an oven than from any other cause.
