FILING A NEED

Recent figures of normal school attendance at the three institutions of that nature in the state again should tend to prove more conclusively in the minds of those of the state governing board of education the need of the continuance of the Eastern Oregon Normal school in La Grande.

Attendance at the Ashland institution, with this years registration complete, has dropped off 24 per cent. Attendance at the Monmouth school has dropped 16 per cent. Similar decreases in attendance were taken at both those institutions a year ago when registration was completed for the 1932-33 terms.

In the face of this general decrease in enrollment at the two western schools in the past two years the La Grande institution increased last year about 8 per cent, and this year slightly over two per cent. What might have been and will be these increases with return of normal times?

Consider also that where the contiguous population of the La Grande school is around 85,000, the supporting population of the Ashland or Southern Oregon school is around 135,000. Compare then the present enrollment at the local normal of 236 as against the enrollment of 245 or only nine more students at the Ashland school. Monmouth, with a supporting population considered around 600,000, shows but a 395 enrollment this year.

It is proof conclusive that the Eastern Oregon school is truly filling a need of higher education this side of the Cascades. With a program under the guidance of Supt. Inlow practically covering here every field in the first two years of college work, the local institution plays a highly prominent part as it fills the need and desire of higher education for the young people of its territory.

La Grande can watch with just pride the progress of the Eastern Oregon Normal school in this community. Community assistance and active participation in all matters of this school's progress are most heartily deserved and will be a decided help in bringing here what in time must and will be demanded by the ever increasing enrollment — a complete four-year college for Eastern Oregon.

To Stage Play Friday Evening At Local Church The young people of the Central Church of Christ are to present a play Friday night in the church auditorium, a four act comedy drama entitled "Along the Missouri" and especially apropos to present financial conditions. The play is being coached by Rev. Paul De F. Morrison, who has had much experience in directing amateur productions, and he states that in his opinion it will be of unusual high entertainment value.

The play centers in a typical farm on the Missouri river, and comedy and pathos mingled with the love affairs of two young couples. Mr. Morrison states that he expects a fine performance from the young people of the cast.

Price of admission has been kept down to a minimum. The curtain will go up at 8 o'clock.
