

COVE GROUPS STAGE THREE PRODUCTIONS

COVE (Special) — The Campfire Girls scored a very decided success with their three one-act plays given at the Cove gym Saturday. The first play was "Ghost Hunters," an amusing story of four young people who went ghost hunting and had several thrilling experiences before the ghost, a very material one, was captured.

The characters were Maxine Love, Velma Richards, Charles Fisher and Conrad Anderson as the four young people, Claude Baker, the policeman on the beat and Logan Anderson Jr. the ghost.

The second play was "Loving Lunatics," depicting the trials of a maid, a man and a servant who meet in a lunatic asylum and each is convinced that the other two are insane. These parts were played by Phyllis Hancock and Charles Fisher representing the young couple for whom the adventure ends romantically, and Iva June Allen as the servant girl.

The last play, "Aunt From California," showing the scheming of three sisters to impress a visiting aunt who would take one of them to Europe. Maxine Towle as the actress sister deserves credit for making this playlet the outstanding one of the three, although all the characters were well played and the three plays were exceptionally well chosen.

Parts in the last play were taken by La Verne Houx, Iva June Allen and Maxine Towle as the three sisters, Stella Edvalson the absent mother, whose timely return clears up a situation, which is mystifying to all the characters; Velma Richards, the seamstress who arrives at the wrong time; Phyllis Hancock as the "Aunt From California" and Thelma Anderson, the maid. Miss Anderson also directed the plays and Conrad Anderson, Charles Fisher and Claude Baker were stage managers. Musical numbers before the plays and between acts were piano solos by Mrs. Eugene Robinson, violin and piano selections by Miss Maellizbeth Cooper of La Grande, and vocal selections by Lona Neida Price and J. R. Price.
