CLEAN FOOTBALL by JOCK SUTHERLAND — FAMOUS PITT COACH

THE "do or die" spirit of a player, when making a tackle of a runner in an open field, is commendable, but if the tackler goes about his job, forgetting all the fine points taught him, it is apt to be a painful experience for him.

Throwing oneself at two flying, cleated feet is more than a little dangerous if the action isn't performed right. One of those cleated feet, or a high-rising knee, is likely to strike the tackler.

The correct way to tackle from the side is to get a lot of leg drive and power, keep the eyes open and the head back. In this way the tackler can see just what the runner is going to do.

The big thing is to try to be going a bit faster than the runner. The slower of the two generally gets the most hurts.

The sketch shows the proper way to tackle low.
