BETRAYED OR BETRAYER?

When Leonor F. Loree, of Wall Street, jumped up in meeting, waved a $20 bill and declared that the ending of the gold standard was a heinous violation of trust, he started a lot of people thinking along lines he hadn't intended. His point, of course, was simple enough. He had in his hand a $20 bill. When it went into circulation it was worth $20 in gold; today it is not; hence the government has done something horrible.

But the spectacle of this Wall street man beating his breast is nothing less than grotesque when you put it up against its proper background. Part of that background is the farm belt. In the farm belt there are a lot of farmers jumping up in meeting and waving bits of paper—mortgages, which were contracted when it took one bushel of wheat to buy a dollar and which must be paid when it takes two bushels to buy a dollar.

The farmers have been the victims of a betrayal quite as cruel as that which harrows the soul of Mr. Loree—crueller, perhaps, for no one supposes that Mr. Loree is in danger of losing his home and his bread and butter. Furthermore, the betrayal that came to them came while the dollar was firmly anchored to gold. They were undone by "sound money"—money which for all its soundness, was worth one thing when they borrowed it and another when they had to pay it back. Their demands for relief are just as valid as Mr. Loree's—more so, perhaps, for our departure from gold has not brought the well-fed Mr. Loree into danger of hunger and the loss of everything he owns.

And that isn't all there is to this background, either. This is hardly the psychological moment for a Wall street man to get up on his hind legs and talk about "a violation of trust." There are a good many Americans today who possess beautiful pieces of paper, for which they paid Wall street good money. Wall street pledged its faith that these bits of paper could be redeemed at the price that was paid for them, and that they would bear interest steadily until the moment of redemption came. But today you can buy lots of those pieces of paper for a nickel on the dollar. There are many more that aren't worth even that.

If we are going to wave pieces of paper and yell about betrayals, let's start with farm mortgages and Wall street bonds. After all, Mr. Loree's $20 bill will still buy quite a few groceries.

F. R. Refuses to Make Change in Money Plan

visor to the treasury, Dr. Sprague wrote to President Roosevelt that unrestrained inflation and a breakdown of governmental credit threaten as a result of the present monetary procedure.

The price of domestic gold was fixed today at $33.75 an ounce, unchanged from yesterday, with the dollar slumping again, carrying the world gold price upward from an opening of $34.41.

Officials expressed no perturbation at Sprague's dire predictions. From Warm Springs came word that Mr. Roosevelt was resolved to go ahead with his plan for increasing commodity prices by forcing the price of gold upward through purchases at home and abroad.

In his letter, Sprague called attention to the fact that some issues of government bonds had slipped below par.

Joining this to the fact that the government must borrow huge sums within the next year or so, he predicted that if the present trend continues, investors will be unwilling to put their money in government bonds.

The result, he said, would be that the administration would be forced to meet its obligations with new issues of paper money.

MEIER PICKS MEN TO FILL EMPTY SEATS

In line with the liquor bill Representative Abrams today introduced the unemployment relief bill calling for an appropriation of $3,000,000 from revenue from liquor sales to be used for state relief. If more funds were necessary for relief the board of control would be authorized to issue certificates of indebtedness against this revenue.

Recommended by Meier
The bill is in line with the recommendations of the governor in his message and carries the emergency clause. It has already been approved by the steering committee and should be up for action within the next few days. Another new measure introduced providing for postage fees on small also was approved. Ten bills were introduced in the house and three in the senate.

Governor Meier said he expected to present a special message to the legislature tomorrow, dealing with the Bonneville power project.

A resolution was presented the house today which would authorize the governor to offer a reward for the arrest and conviction of the assassin or assassins of W. Frank Akin, special investigator for the governor of the port of Portland.

Bills vetoed by the governor at the close of the regular session early last spring still stand to receive the unanimous approval of the senate when they return for consideration. The third of these, known as the "back to the land movement" bill was passed.

Duke university and Kentucky have played annually since 1930 and Duke has won all four games.
