NEW PARTY FOR GREAT BRITAIN? OBSERVERS ASK

By Oscar Leiding LONDON (AP) — Dominating the British political picture, as the session of parliament develops, is the question whether the national government is planning to weld itself into a new party.

Many in political circles foresee the formation of a national party which would swallow up the conservative party and the liberal and laborite supporters of the MacDonald cabinet.

These critics assert that public opinion is rising against the government and as evidence cite its resounding defeat in East Fulham, a London borough, in a by-election to fill a vacancy in the house of commons, besides the decided laborite gains in the municipal elections.

It is up to the national government, some political observers say, to do something to recapture its waning popularity and the formation of a national party may be the answer.

What was said, for the first time officially, was that the coalition formed two years ago plans to go through the next general election in its present form.

"The condition of the world now," said MacDonald, life-long laborite until he consented to head the coalition, "means that any attempt to return to party government—which is bound very soon to become partisan government—is not only a mistake, it is a crime."

"We are sticking together to see this job through," said Baldwin, conservative leader and former prime minister. "It will be a long time before there is an election and there is a great deal to be done."

"There is a transformation taking place in the British mind on the subject of party politics," said Sir John Simon, foreign secretary and liberal national leader. "The old controversies that divided parties are dead."

Some political observers, reading between the lines of those statements, were convinced that plans are on foot to raise a national party banner.

Others, however, point out that the make-up of the conservative party would never permit it to bury its identity into a party of the moderate right. The "die-hards" they say always will cling to the old ideals of the conservative party and the present coalition, with its laborite and liberal wings, could hardly be led to fusion in the face of such opposition.

These critics assert that public opinion is rising against the government and as evidence cite its resounding defeat in East Fulham, a London borough, in a by-election to fill a vacancy in the house of commons, besides the decided laborite gains in the municipal elections.

QUEZON TO TALK INDEPENDENCE IN CHATS WITH F. R.

By K. E. Bonar MANILA, P. I. (AP) — With the period in which the pending Philippine independence act must be accepted nearing expiration on January 17, 1934, the insular legislature tied itself into parliamentary knots in trying to reach a decision.

The bitter fight began before the opening of the annual 100-day session July 17 and it was nearly three months later before a definite program was advanced by Manuel Quezon, the mercurial senate president, who has completely dominated the proceedings.

Plans Washington Trip He then had the legislature go on record as opposing the act in its present form, but leaving the way clear for formal acceptance nevertheless before the lapsing of the congressional proffer of freedom.

Quezon then revealed his plan to go to Washington for a conference with President Roosevelt. If the president would assure him congress would consider amendments which he desired, he announced he would cable a recommendation to the legislature to accept the act.

Time and again Quezon denounced the act as completely unsatisfactory but he would not assume the responsibility of demanding that the legislature reject it outright. The triennial general elections are scheduled for next June and his foes charged he was afraid of defeat at those polls if he cast aside the independence demanded by Filipinos for three decades.

Quezon's refusal to approve a referendum containing a single question of acceptance or rejection resulted in scrapping the plan for a plebiscite, after all other details were arranged. The insular house in September adopted a three-question plebiscite bill sponsored by Quezon, but the measure bogged down in the senate.

Then Senator Sergio Osmeña, outstanding champion of acceptance, with an eye to the June elections, unexpectedly presented a motion at an all-night session, to accept the act. It was voted down, 15 to 4.

Next, Quezon prevailed on both branches to ratify the senate's adverse action. This, he said, did not mean absolute rejection, as the law provides only that it must be accepted within a year. So the way apparently was left clear for the legislature to reverse itself, if desired.

Out of the confusion reigning in Philippine politics for weeks the only clear conclusion was that Quezon was complete master of the situation.

AT THE LIBERTY

James Dunn and Joan Bennett do a scene from "Arizona to Broadway," the new production from Fox. P. S. They like it.

"Arizona to Broadway," the new Fox comedy with its locale clear across the United States, is to be shown at the Liberty Saturday.

James Dunn, cast in the leading masculine role, has a new leading lady playing opposite him. She is Joan Bennett who makes her return to the screen after a protracted absence of several months.

Starting in the wilds of Arizona, the plot of the film moves east until it ends right in the heart of New York. From the adventuresome gambling of the midway it goes to the businesslike hijacking of the Great White Way.

The Nature club of the Eastern Oregon Normal school tried something new the other day—preparing a stew without use of cooking utensils of any kind. Best of all, the stew was "very eatable." It is reported.

The stew was prepared during an annual hike. At the next meeting of the club there will be a talk on first aid.

BERLIN (AP) — Foreigners aren't the only ones having difficulties about saluting the innumerable banners of new Germany.

Even the storm troops have to be told which flags to greet. Instructions just issued list the following: Battalion and field emblems of the uniformed nazis, flags of the steelhelmet and of the police, and all flags of the pre-war army.

Also flags of the various Hitlerite political and youth organizations. Storm troop signal flags or nazi juvenile banners need not be saluted.

Will We Have To Buy Medicine From Bootleggers?

The Tugwell Bill that will come up for consideration in the next session of Congress would put the food, drug and cosmetic industries under bureaucratic control of a political branch of the government giving them no recourse to the courts in questioning the decision of the designated political officer. Manufacturers say the measure would restrict their businesses and cause unemployment.

Advertising Mistakes... "A question before many of us is what change of advertising policy, if any, should be made in view of present financial and business conditions. It is perfectly natural for us to give consideration to some degree of retrenchment, but it is dangerous to let reduction in expenditure be such as to bring about a real gap in the continuity of the advertising. It is a common mistake for some advertisers to think that they can turn advertising on and off like water from a faucet and expect it to become immediately effective whenever they are prepared to resume operations. Advertising does not work that way. Temporary conditions should not influence us to make too serious inroads on the program of advertising, which can be wisely conceived only on a long term basis."—Francis H. Sisson, President American Bankers association.
