Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted. — Galatians 6: 1.

FOR BETTER HOUSING

It is reported in Washington that the huge federal public works program is going to get another shot in the arm. All the $3,300,000,000 fund originally voted for this program will be allotted by Jan. 1. It is doing the recovery effort a great deal of good, but it begins to look as if there is not quite enough of it. So now it is expected that the administration will boost it to a total of $5,000,000,000. This being so, the next question to decide is, for what shall the money be used?

We certainly need few more public buildings, such as post-offices and courthouses. Highways and waterways received a huge slice from the original program. So did naval construction. There remains, however, one field in which almost unlimited sums could be used properly; a field in which money spent not only revives industry and puts men to work, but erects a sounder and safer foundation for all American society.

This, of course, is the field of housing. There are in American cities today some 9,000,000 homes that belong in or close to the slum classification. No program that we could finance now could replace all of them with decent dwellings, but it is at least evident that we cannot take too big a bite for the size of the problem involved. These 9,000,000 slum homes present a job that the nation could work on for years.

Spending money on housing is one of the most direct of all ways to promote a business revival. It gets a great many men to work, it restores realty values, it stimulates trade in many basic raw materials and semi-finished industries. If we want to get back to prosperity, the more money we pour into slum clearance plans, the better. Yet that is only half of it.

Even in prosperous times, money put into slum clearance would be money well spent. It is hard to build a healthy society when a large part of the society is housed unhealthfully. Slums breed crime, disease, vice, and poor citizenship generally. They cost us infinitely more than the cost of replacing them. They are perhaps the greatest single drag on democracy's feet. If the public works fund is to be boosted, the administration will do well to pour much into a housing program.

Not every boy can become a Ford, an Edison, or a Rockefeller, but every one who is not afraid or ashamed to work can make an honorable and useful place for himself and he doesn't have to begin in a "white-collar" job either.

You have never heard real bragging unless you have listened to the fat lady who took off two pounds by hemorrhoid dieting.

Scarcely a day passes without the announcement from some business houses of national magnitude that is turning again to newspaper advertising to reach the public.

Buckets and Goal

Additional Interpretations Given To Merchants as to N. R. A. Rulings

PORTLAND, Ore. (Special) — Interpretations vitally affecting retail merchants operating under the retail code were received today from Washington by Frank Messenger, Oregon-Idaho NRA compliance director.

The rulings hold that coupons and premiums may be offered in connection with sales promotions plans, if the cost of the premiums is added to the merchandise sold, and the premiums are properly advertised. There is no restriction in the retail code against premiums and coupons as such, but they must be offered in accordance with retail code regulations governing their utilization.

Rebates may be promoted with legitimate sales stimulus, the ruling set forth, but must also conform to the restrictions on this type of sales stimulus in the retail code. However, where a state law forbids rebates, the NRA ruling does not make them permissible.

The retail code provides that hourly wage rates, or commission, shall prevail at least the minimum wage for the district in which they work. The code does not provide how commission earnings in excess of the minimum shall be determined, and this is a matter to be adjusted between employer and employee.

Chain stores with three or more branches in towns of less than 2500 population must conform to the wage and hour provisions of the retail code, unless the total number of employes in all these stores is less than five. Single-unit stores in towns under 2500 are not required to observe the wage and hour provisions of the code.

Towns of less than 2500 population are governed by provisions of the retail code if they border on, or are in the trade area of, larger towns. However, the wage provisions for towns under 2500 still apply, even if the smaller town is in the trade area of a larger community, but all the fair practice provisions of the retail code must be observed by merchants in the smaller town.

Fountains and lunch counters in drug stores, if they are well-defined and separate departments, may be operated under the provisions of the limitation president's re-employment agreement as applicable to restaurants and food dispensaries. Employes in these well defined lunch counter departments of drug stores need not conform to the wage and hour provisions of the retail drug code.

Retail fuel stores selling livestock, feeds and food preparations to be eaten under the provisions of the retail code, it was held. Any store which deals in food, whether for human or animal consumption, is not bound by the retail code. Such stores will come under the provisions of a code to be approved later, and now should be operating under the provisions of the president's re-employment agreement.
