"KRAKATOA" IS FILM OF ISLE OF BIG VOLCANO

In connection with the feature picture starring El Brendel today and tomorrow, the Liberty theatre also is showing a film, two reels in length, of unquestioned educational value. It is entitled "Krakatoa," and has to do with the volcanic island of the same name.

Situated in the Strait of Sunda, between Java and Sumatra, the island in 1883 was the scene of a volcanic disturbance of major proportions. The crater walls of Krakatoa fell in, together with a part of the ocean bed, gathering beneath the waves two-thirds of the island. A giant ocean wave inundated the coasts of Java and Sumatra, and caused a life loss of 36,500. Three hundred villages were destroyed by the wave and the noise was heard for 2,000 and more miles.

The picture shows much of interest of the present day island, including an eruption of the still active volcano.

Japan's wheat production this year amounted to 7,789,000 koku, an increase of 21.6 per cent from the 1932 crop and 23 per cent more than the average for the previous five years.

WEBFOOTS PLAY ST. MARY'S TEAM ON THANKSGIVING

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Nov. 28 (Special)—The University of Oregon Webfoots will wind up their 1933 grid schedule Thanksgiving day, November 30, when they meet St. Mary's at the Kazar stadium in San Francisco. It will be the fifth meeting between the Webfoots and the Gaels.

Woe Is Fistian! Baer Won't Be Back

By Gayle Talbot (Associated Press Sports Writer) NEW YORK (AP)—It was a sad, sad day for fistianas when Max Adelbert Baer, the finest heavyweight prospect this country has produced in many a day, paraded his brawny beauty before a movie camera.

They're saying now that Max, of the curly hair and sveite proportions, never again will climb between the ropes—that is, unless the cameras are grinding and Max's makeup is faultless.

Reports from the box office reveal that the former Livermore Butcher Boy has scored a real, unabridged success in his first cinema adventure. They're calling him a "find," and not because he does any particularly fancy fighting. In fact, some of the boxing experts, pressed into service as movie critics here, found all kind of fault with his ring technique.

A Minor Detail "Looks that," one of them growled as Max mixed it up with Primo Carnera on the screen. "Why he's wide open for a good left. If he'd done that against Schmeling he'd a landed right square in my lap!"

But, fortunately for Max's movie career, he wasn't fighting Schmeling at the time and, besides, he no longer has to worry about any sports writer's opinion.

Max's appeal, as the romantic lover, is to the ladies. They know acting. The big fellow is so good in the play's more tender moments, in fact, that his new bosses aren't even worrying about getting a fight sequence in his next production. Those shoulders, those windrows of sparkling teeth, those eyes—but why bore the fair fans with a vulgar prize fight!

Wouldn't Be Bright With the kind of money he can collect in Hollywood it doubtless would seem very silly to Baer to return to the boxing business. Even if he would like to whip Carnera and hear himself called "champion" and gain renown as the man who brought the title back to the good old U. S. A., it still would seem a little silly.

First, it would call for a lot of training, whereas Max can go along movie herding in add moments and still have himself a whale of a time collecting breach of promise suits. If you don't think that appeals to the boy from the golden west, you don't know your M. Baer.

Secondly, when he finally did get Carnera in the ring he would have to take the short end of the purse, which is distasteful under the best conditions. Too, he would be running a chance of getting his features scrambled to where they wouldn't let him inside the studio gate.

So, the chances are great that fistianas is in for a period of mourning. It can't recapture the Max who stood under the showers at Yankee Stadium last summer, a savage fighting man who just had pounded Schmeling into human wreckage, and shouted he was going to do the same thing to that (censored) Carnera.

Max's beauty was not born to blush for long among the cauliflowerers.
