Farmers Report Bilking on Part Of Hog Buyers

"Don't let a hog buyer subtract the processing tax from the market price."

This is the warning being given by those in touch with provisions of the agricultural adjustment act at Oregon State college. Word has been received that some buyers, perhaps through misunderstanding of the facts, are quoting the regular price to the producer less the amount of the processing tax.

Prices quoted on hogs at the Portland stockyards or at any other public market in the United States are the prices which are actually paid to the shippers, and the tax is not deducted from these prices," explains E. L. Potter, head of the agricultural economic division. "Farmers who sell hogs to buyers at the market price and then permit the buyer to deduct the tax are simply allowing themselves to be cheated that much."

The processing tax on hogs is laid to raise from the general public the funds sufficient to help restore a fair purchasing power to hogs sold by the producer and at the same time control production at market requirements. To deduct the tax from the farmer selling the hogs would defeat the purpose at the outset, it is pointed out.

Farmers who butcher their own hogs for sale as pork products or to sell dressed carcasses must pay the processing tax on those animals, however, as such growers are both producers and processors, and as such presumably get both profits. Blanks may be obtained from the internal revenue office in the Custom house, Portland, for reporting on hogs slaughtered. Tax on hogs killed one month is payable the next. Hogs killed by or for a farmer strictly for use by his own family are not subject to the processing tax.

Details as to the form of the hog control contract are expected soon by the extension service at O. S. C., and as soon as they are received, Oregon growers will be informed and given an opportunity to join in the plan if they desire.
