O God, thou hast cast us off; O restore us again. Thou hast made the land to tremble; Thou hast showed thy people hard things: Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee; that it may be displayed because of the truth.—Psalm 60: 1, 4.

STATES' RIGHTS?
Among the minor oddities of these changed times there is the fact that this Democratic administration is apt to see a stirring battle for states' rights carried on by Republicans. The battle lines have formed already. "Local autonomy and state sovereignty must be restored," is the rallying-cry of the G. O. P. A big Republican paper not long ago devoted a column-long front-page editorial to the task of proving that the Republicans really are the heirs of the Jeffersonian tradition in politics.

And if all of this seems slightly cockeyed, to one who takes his politics in the old-time manner, all that can be said is that these are cockeyed times, and that stranger things than Republican adherence to the doctrines of Thomas Jefferson will yet be seen.

As a matter of fact, this new potter about states' rights conceals one of the fundamental problems of the moment. The trend toward centralization of government has been speeded up enormously during the past few years — not from design, but through the logic of circumstances. The federal government has had to do an almost infinite number of things that never before were considered the federal government's job — everything from putting men to work in the forests to lending money to railroads, from bolstering up banks to regulating the production of hogs. It has reached out tentacles that touch the life of the ordinary citizen at every point.

At the same time, the structure of local government has been crumbling. Cities have been unable to collect taxes, city services have been given up, policemen and teachers have gone unpaid, municipal bonds have gone into default — and the end is not yet in sight.

So we have, on the one hand, a vast extension of federal activities; and, on the other, a swift and steady shrinkage of local government. And while men prepare to fight for a revival of Jeffersonian principles, city officials go to Washington begging for even more help from the federal treasury. Where all of this is going to end is one of the most puzzling issues of the day. It may be that the end of the emergency will find most of the traditional set-up re-establishing itself, more or less automatically. Or it may be that we shall have to admit that the old Jeffersonian concept of government no longer is applicable.

CARS FIGURE IN COLLISION
Cars driven by Nello Grinnett and Frank Lovelace figured in a minor collision at Depot last night. Jefferson streets at 11:15 o'clock yesterday, according to reports both drivers made to the police. No one was injured.

Dance Group At East Normal on Thursday
The dancers have been appearing before many college groups in the west and their appearances always have been heralded because of their fine interpretations of modern and classic dances. Mr. Frazier also plays a group of solos on the piano and his piano accompaniment is an important feature of the dance, it is said.

Mr. Frazier, who studied at the University of Oregon, had the experience of being the first "Yankee" to play a piano recital in Mexico City at which time he received special honors from the Mexican government. The troupe, with headquarters in Chicago, is on its second western tour, carrying its own special lighting and stage effects.

Here is a scene from "I'm No Angel", now appearing at the Liberty Theatre with Mae West in the starring role.

Mae West has more dynamic energy than any two other actresses in pictures. Take the word of Wesley Ruggles, her director, for that. "Work, monotonous repetition, long hours, fatigue apparently mean nothing to her," he declares. "She is going stronger at the end of a long, hard day than when she started."

She proved it to him during the filming of her latest starring picture for Paramount, "I'm No Angel," showing now at the Liberty theatre. As Tina, the carnival dancer, Miss West stood for long hours rehearsing with scores of extras the scene in which she dances "the midway." And again, there were many rehearsals of the scenes in the film in which Miss West takes on the work of a lion tamer.

"Mae doesn't just go through the motions," insists Ruggles. "She puts her mind 100 per cent on everything she does. She always is trying for new business, some new trick or expression that will captivate audiences."

CHILDREN TO PRESENT PLAY

leged violation of the code. The specific charge was that the Standard Oil company of New Jersey and its subsidiaries had inaugurated a "boys' club contest" and had refused to accede to a request by the oil administration to discontinue the practice.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP) — Babe Ruth, bateman, is titular head of what the government today charged was an oil code violation on the part of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

The contest inaugurated by the company is known as "Babe Ruth's Boy's Club Contest."

In the contest, coupons were alleged to have been given to children who in turn distributed them to friends, relatives or neighbors to be presented one at a time by adults to standard stations and dealers.

Prizes were to be given to the boy or girl credited with the greatest number of coupons turned in by his or her name, it was claimed.
