Advices Brewers Of The Values Of Advertising

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) - Declaring "the day is past when something desired is gained by whispering into the ear of a politician," Thomas H. Beck, of New York, advised the members of the United States Brewers' association to embark on national advertising campaigns.

Speaking at the closing session of the 98th annual convention of the brewers, Beck, president and editorial director of Collier's, declared: "Break off from the past and keep pace with the time by national advertising. We are out of the subsidy period and into the advertising period. The day is past when something desired can be gained by whispering into the ear of a politician or by bribery or corruption. The people are now to be approached for approval. Take your case to them."

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, of New York was reelected president.

The supreme court of Missouri must decide whether the Jackson county court possesses authority to fix a budget for the country.

Going all the way with Roosevelt is easy enough when Uncle Sam is paying one's way.
