NO ONE HURT SERIOUSLY IN PLANE CRASH

Mount Pleasant, Ia. Fred D. Dustin, Bevere, Mass., and Harry Young, New Zealand.

All suffered slight cuts and were severely shaken up, but otherwise unharmed.

The plane itself, a single engine Pottler, was wrecked. The engine and instruments can be salvaged, however.

The plane had just taken off on a test flight preparatory to a flight toward the South Pole in company with the other expedition monoplane.

The two planes were to have acted as transports to a depot being established 100 miles south of here.

Less than an hour after the crash, the other monoplane occupied by William Brewster and Captain U. S. Navy, flew south carrying 800 pounds of food rations as previously planned.

Dustin reported at 3:30 p. m., from the depot that his flight was successful and that he was returning to Little America.

Admiral Byrd was not discouraged by the crash.

powerful industrial magnate who had fooled their country's regulations.

English-born Samuel Insull, who fled to ancient Athens for refuge after his utilities empire collapsed in modern Chicago, spent nearly a year and a half fighting return to the land of his adoption.

The business leader and patron of the arts was in Paris when a Cook county, Ill., grand jury indicted him for larceny and embezzlement Oct. 4, 1932.

Three days later he disappeared and the United States asked France to arrest him.

Oct. 9 he fled to Athens from Milan, Italy. Then opened the tedious battle of United States authorities to return him for trial.
