FEAR OF FAILURE
By Brooke Peters Church

Mr. Smith was an unusually brilliant man. He was graduated from school and college with honors, and stood high in his profession because of his intellectual attainments. His great disappointment in life was that his only son, Bobby, was apparently dull. When the boy brought home his school reports there was always a row between father and son. His marks were average, it is true, but his father expected a line of honors, and blustered and stormed or indulged in biting sarcasm at the boy's mediocrity.

Bobby was a great admirer of his father's brains and tried his best to give satisfaction, but constant fear of his father's displeasure oppressed him so that his work grew worse and worse. He slept badly, lost his appetite, and finally had what was very near a nervous breakdown.

It is not necessarily true that the son of a brilliant man will follow in his father's footsteps. But the man to whom learning comes easily can seldom understand the difficulties which it may present to another.

To hold up one's own achievement as the standard of perfection to a child who is conscientiously doing his best work, is not only discouraging but actually paralyzing to his faculties. Some children under such treatment develop an attitude of indifference and apparently disregard the criticism; others, more sensitive, perhaps, grow morbidly introspective and deprecating. In neither case has the criticism done any good, but rather it has defeated its own ends, preventing the boys from developing along their own lines and gaining the self-confidence necessary for success in any field of work.

Health

APPETITE AND HUNGER

Appetite and hunger are related, but far from identical.

Normal appetite is the expectant feeling which comes upon one at meal times, a feeling which suggests that food would be welcome.

Appetite is largely a mental attitude. The best proof of this is that appetite may be quickly dispelled and lost by such incidents as an unpleasant sight, by anger, joy, or by some interesting task.

Hunger, on the other hand, represents a deep constitutional need which is not readily dulled except by food. If hunger remains ungratified, it becomes in time a most compelling force, capable of driving the sufferer to extraordinary action.

The present-day theory advanced to explain the peculiar sensations which we call hunger holds that they are provoked by a drop in the concentration of sugar in the blood. When the blood sugar falls below a certain level (80 to 90 milligrams of sugar per 100 cubic centimeters of blood), the individual feels hungry.

The relation between blood sugar and hunger also is illustrated by the fact that diabetic patients who take or are given a dose of insulin somewhat in excess of their need develop a keen craving for food.

Despite the fact that appetite and hunger are not directly related, in most persons the amount of food eaten according to the dictates of appetite conforms closely to body requirements. Where there is any discrepancy between appetite and bodily needs, the fault is in the direction of excess.

One British authority suggests an interesting psychology of overeating:

Those who have never had enough to eat when young, usually through poor social conditions, carry on the habit of eating all they can when they reach affluence.

"In many elderly people, too, with no great interest in life except food and possessions, natural appetite often atrophies and is replaced by greedy habits."

The Garden

SOME UNCOMMON VEGETABLES

If the home vegetable plot is limited to the things one would buy in the market only half its possibilities are realized. The greatest fun comes in growing vegetables new to you.

For example, there is chervil, which resembles parsley, but is thought by many superior in flavor. Upland cress and corn salad are appetising additions to the salad list. Hamburg rooted parsley is a delicious ingredient of stews. Celeriac, or rooted celery is a winter keeper, which, when cooked and served in salads, imparts a delicious celery flavor.

Popcorn is as easy to grow as sweet corn. The new South American variety is most popular just now. Horseradish sets will grow a crop of roots which can be ground up as needed next winter. Tarragon plants will provide a crop of leaves which will transform vinegar in which they are steeped.

Leeks are cousins to the onion, but more highly esteemed for cooking. Okra can be grown in northern as well as southern gardens and is delicious in soups. Bermuda onions can be grown to a fair size from plants which are started in Texas and shipped north.

Edible pod peas, which are cooked like stringlessbeans, are worth trying. Mammoth pod sugar grows pods five inches long. The French like them. Small fruited tomatoes, resembling in shape grapes, currants, cherries, peaches, plums and pears, may be grown to decorate salads or to make preserves.

Biology and child psychology are increasingly popular subjects in Oklahoma, the state librarian reported.

Tight pitching, a conspicuous feature in all of yesterday's games, was largely responsible for placing Hollywood in a tie with Los Angeles today for first place in the Pacific Coast league.

Frank Raglan, hurling the Portland Beavers to their first victory over Los Angeles, 3 to 2, allowed only six scattered hits and won his own game by bringing in all three of the Beaver runs with his two-base hit in the seventh inning. Jack Wilson, replacing him in the last of the ninth, gave the Angels one more bingle. The Beavers collected nine. The Angels scored both their runs in the eighth inning.

While Hollywood, defeating Oakland 10 to 2, collected 15 hits, Pitcher Tom Sheehan held the Oaks to nine scattered blows.

George Caster, youthful right handed moundsman, held the San Francisco Seals to seven well distributed hits while the Seattle Indians collected 12 and won the contest, 4 to 1.

In his first Coast league appearance Clarence Mitchell, San Francisco Missions hurler, gave Sacramento just six hits as he twirled his teammates to a 3 to 1 victory.

La Grande is conceded an even chance to win, according to those in charge of the club, who believe the local infield to be one of the finest in the league.

Cove High Nine Wins From Tiger Team 8-6

Barney DeBorde, Cove hurler, had the edge on the La Grande pitchers, allowing but four hits, while his teammates socked out five, and Barney himself contributed a three-bagger and a single, for a team total of seven. Errors were plentiful with neither team playing strong defensive ball.

Davis, L. H. S., led his teammates at the plate with two hits, including a two-bagger, and Biggs and Arnoldus each connected with bingles. Darrell DeBorde, Cove, led the hitters with three hits in three times at bat.

La Grande held a four to three lead at the end of the first inning, neither team scoring in the second. Cove tied the count in the third, and La Grande scored again in the fourth, leading at that time 5 to 4. In the fifth Cove scored four runs and La Grande made only one more, in the seventh.

Next week the Tigers journey to Elgin.

The lineups yesterday:

La Grande: Gooderham, 3; Davis, cf; Biggs, lf; Walden, c; Stitt, s; F. Leonard, p; Robertson, 1b; P. Leonard, rf; Beck, 2; Arnoldus replaced Leonard in left field and Koyle and Young pitched. F. Leonard hurled three innings, and Koyle and Young each one and a half—each of the three whiffing two Cove batters.

IMBLER WINS 13-3

The Imbler High school team, perennial county champion, defeated Elgin at Imbler yesterday 13 to 3, with Elgin making no earned runs. All three of their counters were made on overthrows, one in the first and two in the third.

Imbler bunched hits to count five scores in the first inning, and Keith McKinnis, pitching star for Imbler, struck out 17 Elgin batters. Ray Knezevich, Elgin pitcher, whiffed 11 men.

McKinnis hit one homer and another single which allowed him to continue on home due to an Elgin error. Ralph Frizzell hit a homer and a three-base hit for Imbler.

The score:	R.	H.	E.
Elgin	3	4	7
Imbler	13	9	5

Batteries: Knezevich and Phippen; McKinnis and Fowler, Bushman, umpire.

O. S. C. Nine Noses Out Pacific 2-1

CORVALLIS, Ore., Apr. 7 (AP)—A pitchers' battle in the first baseball game of the season was broken up yesterday when Oregon State defeated Pacific university 2 to 1 by a squeeze play in the ninth inning with the bases loaded.

Bob Bergstrom laid down a bunt which brought in the winning run.

Coal Operators Win Injunction

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 7 (AP)—Judge C. B. Kennamer in U. S. district court late Friday granted Alabama commercial coal operators a 10-day injunction restraining General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, and the U. S. district attorney from enforcing the wage raising, hour cutting amendment to the bituminous coal code.

FOUR MEASURES WILL BE VOTED ON AT PRIMARY

SALEM, Ore. (Special) — Measures to be voted on by the people at the primary election, May 18, have been certified to the county clerks by P. J. Stadelman, secretary of state, the list including four measures referred by the special session of the 1933 legislature and one referendum sponsored by petition.

Principal interest appears to center in the measure to appear on the ballot as a result of petition, the school relief sales tax bill, passed by the special session of the 1933 legislature and one referendum sponsored by petition.

Principal interest appears to center in the measure to appear on the ballot as a result of petition, the school relief sales tax bill, passed by the special session. The ballot will carry the following description of the bill's purpose:

"To provide for relief of the existing serious financial conditions of the public schools, due to unusual tax delinquency, by collecting a tax of one and one-half per cent of gross receipts from retail sales of tangible personal property and utility service, such tax to be paid by the seller and by him collected from the purchaser; exempting gross receipts of each person up to $50 a month; all net revenues derived from such tax to be apportioned to school districts and the amount thereof deducted from school taxes on property; this law to be effective until June 30, 1936."

The other four measures contained in the certification of the secretary of state and their stated purposes follow:

County Indebtedness and Funding Bond Constitutional Amendment: "Requiring two-thirds vote in counties to authorize county indebtedness exceeding $5,000 for roads; authorizing counties to issue warrants evidencing liabilities imposed by law and which they are powerless to prevent; authorizing any county upon approval by two-thirds vote of electors voting thereon, to issue bonds in amount equal to amount of its outstanding warrants December 31, 1933, with interest thereon to election date, but not exceeding 2½ per cent of assessed valuation of all property in such county; superseding existing special constitutional debt funding provisions for Benton, Clackamas, Crook, Curry, Klamath and Linn counties; but not releasing any existing liabilities."

Criminal Trial Without Jury and Non-Unanimous Verdict Constitutional Amendment: "To provide by constitutional amendment that in criminal trials any accused person, in other than capital cases, and with the consent of the trial judge, may elect to waive trial by jury and consent to be tried by the judge of the court alone, such selection to be in writing, provided, however, that in the circuit court ten members of the jury may render a verdict of guilty or not guilty, save and except a verdict of guilty of first degree murder, which shall be found only by a unanimous verdict, and not otherwise."

Bill Authorizing a State Tuberculosis hospital in Multnomah County: "To authorize the location, construction, operation and maintenance by the State of Oregon of a tuberculosis hospital in Multnomah county, Oregon; when funds are available therefor."

Bill Authorizing a State Insane Hospital in Multnomah County: "To authorize the location, construction, operation and maintenance by the State of Oregon of an insane hospital in Multnomah county, Oregon, when funds are available therefor."

Peas are a Mainstay

JULIUS CAESAR was warned to beware the Ides of March. The housewife should also beware the "I'ds" of March—"I'd like to serve a hearty dinner tonight but I can't afford a roast."—"I'd like to fix something more appetizing but I haven't the time."—"I'd give anything if I could think of a new and interesting dish!" How often she says things like that in this month of uncertain weather and very certain appetites!

In Julius Caesar's day—and long before—the housewife found peas a first class standby in making her "I'ds of March" amount to something more than vague wishes. But the Roman matron never dreamed of the convenient canned peas which stand on the modern housewife's kitchen shelves waiting to help her out with flavor and nourishment at a very little cost.

A Sauce and a Salad

Here are two good pea recipes to remember when you want to serve the best dinner possible, and you don't quite see how you're going to do it. The next time you feel the "I'ds" of March coming on, dress up salmon or a meat loaf with Pea and Caper Sauce: Melt three tablespoons butter. Add three tablespoons flour and stir until smooth. Add the liquor from one 11-ounce can of peas and one and a half cups milk slowly, stirring and cooking until creamy and smooth. Season to taste, add the peas and two tablespoons capers. Serve very hot.

Pea, Celery and Onion Salad: Combine one 11-ounce can of peas and one cup of celery and marinate them in a quarter of a cup of French dressing for about an hour in the ice box. Add half a cup sliced onion, arrange on crisp lettuce and serve. This serves six.

AGAIN
I was to be the MISTRESS of the House on 56th Street
THE first time I came to the house on 56th Street, I came as a bride. I was the mistress of a house of love. Now I had come back to it—come back after all those unhappy years—to become the mistress of a house of hate!
I had suffered the anguish of a glorious love there once—and now in this same house, ringing with the ghostly voices of the past, I was to suffer the tortures of an unwanted love.
It was too late to turn back . . . no way to escape the cruel irony that forced me to preside as mistress of a gambling den in the very rooms that were so sacred to the memory of Monty and my little girl!
Perhaps it was merely a coincidence—yet I feared it was something more than that. It was fate! I knew that what had happened in the past was merely a prologue—that the great drama of my life was yet to be played.
That night Blaine tried to take me in his arms . . .
