GRADUATE AMBITIONS

One of the most interesting surveys ever taken in this city is printed on the front page of today's Observer, showing the ambitions of the members of the La Grande High school class of graduates. It is doubly interesting—for what it lists and for what it doesn't list.

For example, none of the girls considered being a housewife—it was stenography, nursing, music or the like. That should arouse the young males of the community to something akin to consternation. It would seem, offhand, that the grand old calling of keeping house is headed for the discard. We rather imagine however that after awhile some of the stenographers, the nurses, the beauticians and the secretaries will wind up singing little tots to sleep and hoping that the biscuits suit friend hubby. Yes, we rather imagine the old-fashioned customs will go on about the same as usual.

Another surprising thing was that only one senior considered coaching and that senior was a girl, who wrote it "Physical Ed. Teacher". Maybe the boys fear the "panning" a coach sometimes gets when his teams take it on the chin! Visions of our causes being saved in some future decade by a silver tongued orator out of the 1934 L. H. S. class vanished a bit when we discovered the young man who favored public speaking, qualified his choice by adding "or medicine". At that a doctor gets more attention when he speaks than the rank and file of orators!

Seriously speaking, however, it was amazing how really practical and modest were the choice of these seniors! There wasn't a far-fetched ambition in the entire list, and nine of ten vocations listed sounded completely possible. It causes us to suspect that these 128 seniors are going out into life next week with their eyes completely open—ambitious to do the best they can, yet unwilling to hitch their wagon to a star until they find out just how well the wheels are greased and the road is open.

They Solved the Gettle Kidnaping

Detective Lieutenants W. C. Burns, left, and H. P. Gerhardt, of the Los Angeles police department, had James Kirk under surveillance for a month as a bank robbery suspect. They installed a dictograph in Kirk's room, listened constantly for weeks—and uncovered the clues leading to rescue of William F. Gettle without ransom payment, and arrest of three men and two women.

TWO THINGS TO REMEMBER

I'VE LOST EVERYTHING BUT MY APPETITE! I SHOULD WORRY!

- REMEMBER that the man worth while is the man who can smile when everything goes dead wrong.
- REMEMBER that you're going dead right when you come here. Good used cars that will give years of dependable service.

Their Fight Against Death Stirred New York

COMMITTEE FINDS NEED FOR RELIEF

county judge of Union county, and city manager of La Grande, wish to appeal to the people for their wholehearted support of efforts of a local committee to secure help for the continuance of the Salvation Army work in this community. For some years we have been observing the work of this organization but during the past year, more than ever, we have been impressed with its unselfish motive in administering to the needs of the less fortunate. We therefore, heartily endorse this program of endeavor and feel assured that every dollar donated will be faithfully used in a most effective way to meet the urgent need.

"but have had some tough breaks—with the experience they have under their belts, and with the addition of a seasoned player or two, I expect the squad to make a much better showing the second half of the season than they did the first half. In my opinion they have a splendid chance of coping off the last half championship." A number of churches annually observe the fifth Sunday after Easter as "Rural Life Sunday."
