In Washington

By Herbert Plommer
WASHINGTON—Oil men explain privately that the motive back of the Strong resolution calling for an investigation of the administration of the oil code by a special house committee was to upset, if possible, federal allocation of production.

Party lines disappeared in the vote on the resolution sponsored by the Texas congressman at-large setting his first term. The house refused to order the investigation by a margin of 48 votes.

Administrators of the code have known for some time of growing discontent in some quarters against the way they have handled things. Threats of an investigation by congress have been met with smiling assurances that they have no objections, in fact would welcome such a move.

All along they felt that the move was inspired by those who believed the code was being administered in a too high-handed fashion.

Supreme Court Appeal
It is significant that the resolution was introduced in the house by a Texas and commanded the support of the state's delegation.

The arguments advanced by them were that such an investigation would provide the various state regulatory groups with figures on which oil production quotas were based, if it accomplished nothing else.

The supreme court has before it now an appeal brought by the United States from a decision in Texas holding invalid certain sections of the oil code.

Two companies challenged the constitutionality of the section of the

More Gains in Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, May 26 (AP)—The stock market continued its creeping progress today and a number of issues recorded relatively substantial gains in abnormal activity. Although sentiment was noticeably improved traders were still cautious. The close was steady, and the turnover approximately only 260,000 shares.

code permitting production restrictions. Their contention was upheld by the Texas court, which quashed indictments charging the companies with violating the code.

The court is expected to make its decision—the first NRA case to reach it this session—before it adjourns for the summer either late in May or early in June.

Texas-California Clash
Under the code, Texas is allotted approximately 45 per cent of the national market for oil. The remaining 55 per cent is split up among the other 17 oil-producing states.

When the Strong resolution was called up rather unexpectedly for disposal by the house, it was immediately assailed as an attempt to embarrass the administration's recovery program.

California representatives described it as "the first attempt to bore in on the recovery program." California is one of Texas' strongest rivals in oil production.

The fact that 134 votes were mustered in support of such an investigation would seem to indicate that the vexing problem of production allocation by states is still very much alive.

ODD FELLOWS PROGRESSING ON CEMETERY WORK

At the regular meeting of the Odd Fellows lodge Friday night at their hall it was announced that work was progressing very satisfactorily on the cemetery and that with the work done today and Monday, the cemetery would be very greatly improved.

A windmill is being installed today which will furnish water for the cemetery in unlimited abundance, according to the committee in charge. The well furnishing the water is eight inches in diameter and about 200 feet deep.

Because so many of the members were attending lodge sessions at Tillamook this week, the attendance Friday night was small. Next Friday evening, however, reports will be received from the grand lodge meetings and a large attendance is anticipated.

Making surplus fruit into brandies is advocated by government scientists. This would serve the double purpose of stimulating the market and the consumers.

Strawberries In Sugar Will Hold Shape as Canned

In the order in which they ripen, the Narcissa, Marshal and Corvallis strawberries are recommended for home canning, the latter probably being the most firm, says Lucy A. Case, extension specialist in foods at Oregon State college. In order to aid in retaining the shape of strawberries when canned and to prevent their shrinking and rising to the top of the jar, add sugar and let them stand over night.
