THE GREAT DISTINCTION

Ernest Haycox, successful young western author, has a lot of hard common sense along with the imagination that enables him to turn out entertaining fiction for national magazines. Here is a thought from an article by him in Spokes, weekly publication of the Portland, Oregon, Rotary club:

"There is one highly important distinction between private business and public business. Private business is under the constant necessity of remaining solvent. Public business may magnificently disregard profit and loss. No private executive breathes who can turn out a deficit year after year without going out on his ear. But a senator may sponsor a bill that costs the government half a million dollars a year and be regarded as a great statesman because he hasn't lost us a whole billion."

That is the inescapable corollary of politics in business. Case after case in the records where waste, inefficiency, bureaucracy, red-tape have cost the taxpayers many millions. When government steps in, personal responsibility steps out. The seemingly bottomless purse of the treasury is always there to make up the deficits.

Able executives have occasionally been appointed as managers of government business enterprises—men who, in private business, would be successful and would produce profits and not losses. But under political domination their hands are tied. Constant pressure is brought against them to do this or do that, for purely political reasons. And if the manager complains too loudly when that happens, he is liable to suddenly find himself without a job.

Some day there will be a complete report made on what government-in-business has cost the American taxpayer—and he had better be sitting down when he looks at the total, inasmuch as it is more dangerous to faint standing up.

HOW TO HANDLE WIDOW SPIDER

Now that we have discovered in our very midst that horrible beast "the black widow spider," which is creating much concern around and about, we should have some advice on how to cope with the menace. People who have seen the vicious, inkly black insect declare they have seen or killed her before, not knowing her real identity.

We hereby set forth a few pointers on how to handle the vicious one who is regarded as a "black widow" no doubt because she either killed her hubby or else he ran away from sheer fright or for his own safety.

Suggestion one: If possible secure a suit of armor from some museum. Be sure to check up all the cracks in the armor so that the widow will be unable to enter therein and bite you forthwith. Oh! the armor will so that the lady will not hear you creaking about under the house and thus be ready to do battle with you. The lance which goes with the armor will not be necessary—as you couldn't use the long instrument of death in the close confines underneath a house.

This suggestion is probably out—as you couldn't get a suit of armor unless you went to England—and as the stevedore strike is still on you couldn't get the bloomin' junk unloaded anyway.

Suggestion two: Get a lard pail or water bucket. Cut holes for the eyes and clamp firmly over your head. This will prevent the widow from jumping on the back of your neck and dealing a lethal blow. Then get a blow torch and heavy riveting gloves and proceed as before—under the house in quest of the Blacklady. Have blow torch lit and ready to play upon the villainous insect at first hand.

This suggestion is already out—as you shouldn't go under the house with a blow torch. Secondly the lard pail might get away and the black lady would take the torch away from you and burn you to a crisp before you could scamper out of the basement.

Suggestion three: Get some deadly poison—more poisonous than the bite of the vampire spider. Put it on a bit of cotton and approach where you think the spider might be lurking. Then throw it in that direction and scuttle away fast.

Still that might be out—the lady might frighten you so that you would become hysterical and thrust the poisoned cotton into your mouth and she, immediately—thus insuring the lady when she bites you as you are already poisoned enough. Just skip this suggestion.

Suggestion four: If afraid to go under the dwelling in quest of the widow—burn the house down. This is out as you would be arrested for incendiarism and put in durance vile. Skip this as the county and city and state need the tax money on your house.

Suggestion five: Leave town if afraid of the black beauty; skip this also as you'll still have to pay taxes and the city couldn't get along without you.

Suggestion six: Forget all these other suggestions. Be gay. Forget about the widow. She's been here a long time—Pendleton East Oregonian.

FOOD, GROCERY CODE UNCHANGED

Word has been received from the Oregon state food and grocery district code authority, according to Lester Kingsley, local food and grocery code administrator, that the present NIRA announcement of price policy does not amend any approved codes (wholesale food and grocery trade, and retail food and grocery trade), and that they are in full effect as now written and that continued compliance with all provisions is required.

Kingsley is advising all retail and wholesale establishments that the food and grocery code is in full force and effect and that the present changes made in other codes has nothing to do with the retail and wholesale grocery code.

Library Chats

(By Mabel E. Doty, Librarian)
With the first anniversary of the New Deal just behind us there should be a high tide of interest in national affairs. The library has recently added several illuminating books on the serious problems confronting the country. Why not resolve to sandwith one in between your lighter reading during the summer months. The following books will help you keep up with the times.

"The Future Comes," by Charles A. Beard. Can American go back to Coolidge's age of innocence. Wilson's new freedom, or Mark Hanna's full dinner pail? Mr. Beard here replies: The past does not return; the future comes.

"On Our Way," by Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The second book published by the president. It is an account of the first year of the Roosevelt administration, in which the president enumerates the milestones that mark the achievement of a new public policy.

"Our Economic Society," by R. G. Turwell. This book is a study of American levels and how to improve them.

"Road to Recovery," by John F. Wharton. A primer of economics for bewildered Americans. The writer is in entire sympathy with the aims of the administration but questions the value of the means employed. A stimulating book.

"The Tax Hacket," by Ray E. Unreterner. A small volume which answers many pertinent questions. The author searches out reasons why American citizens are paying four times as much in taxes today as they did in 1913, and why this staggering amount is apt to be increased unless something is done about it.

Pat Woods Winner Of Livermore Title

LIVERMORE, Cal., June 11 (AP)—Pat Woods, hard-riding Blackfoot, Idaho cowboy, today holds Livermore's bronco busting championship. Another Idaho rider, Burrell Mulkey, of Salmon Falls, placed second in the final contest.

You'll Get More and Spend Less With a "Caterpillar" DIESEL Tractor

Figure it out for yourself—82-cent fuel oil against 15-cent gasoline. That's a price saving of 60 per cent. Now add to that a saving of at least 40 per cent in gallons used. The two together make a net saving to the "Caterpillar" owner of better than 70 per cent under the cost of operating a gas tractor. Better investigate!
