Three New Members Are Initiated Into Auxiliary to Veterans Of Foreign Wars at Tuesday Meeting

Three new members, Edith Reise Brooks, Laura Comstock and Georgia Hamlin, were given the initiatory work last evening when the auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars met at the Eagles hall. The attendance was very good and the entire evening most interesting. For the program a group of musical numbers was given by Miss Violet Smith, who is the candidate of the Mt. Emily post for queen of the Semi-Centennial celebration next month. Refreshments concluded the meeting.

Winners To Be Dined Tomorrow

In the recent match plays in which the women of the La Grande golf and country club have been interested, the side headed by Mrs. H. E. Dixon, Capt. Hook, was victorious over the side of which Mrs. Harry McKinley, Capt. Slice, had charge. According to the original agreement, the winning side will be guests at a dinner to be served Thursday evening at the La Grande hotel at 7:00 o'clock. It is stated that women of the club who did not participate in the match plays may attend the dinner on the no-hostess plan, but all, whether among the players or not, are asked to make their reservations with Mrs. McKinley by Thursday morning.

Relief Society Studies Literature

There were 21 attended the meeting of the Relief society of the Second Ward Wednesday, over which Mrs. Serilda Wade presided. Following the first business meeting, the lesson on literature was presented by Mrs. Eva Price assisted by some of the members, the topic being "Spiritual Voices in Modern Literature." The stake president, Mrs. Josephine Hanks, was a guest.

Della Jean Dahlstrom Given Party

Mrs. John Dahlstrom entertained a company of little folks at Riverside park on the occasion of the seventh birthday anniversary of her daughter, Della Jean. Games and the amusements which the park affords were the entertainment for the afternoon hours and later they were all seated at a table where pick and green predominated, with pink flowers used, and Mrs. Dahlstrom and Mrs. Ethyl Taylor served the birthday cake and ice cream. Della Jean's guests were Betty, Darlene and Clyde Barnes, Ruth Combs, Valva, Christine and Johnny Benson, Eddie Stonebreaker, Betty Taylor and Donna Mae Dahlstrom.

Expect Crowd For Y.W.E.A. Picnic

New Tailleur For Smart, Informal Dining Out

By Rita Ferris (Associated Press Fashion Editor) PARIS (AP) — The evening tailleur in new designs and fabrics has a front seat on the summer style stage. So many varied occasions offer opportunity for its wear that more and more smart women here are including it in their wardrobes. It is the thing to put on for restaurant dinners, the theatre and some dancing places when evening gowns and white ties are too formal for the picture.

The evening tailleur began with a design combining a black, ankle-length skirt and jacket with a blouse of contrasting color and now has broadened its scope to include frocks and coats of heavy lace, lame and taffeta.

Tailored Or 'Soft' Sometimes it is as tailored as the tweeds one wears on the street, again as soft in design as a satin blouse. But always it aims at an effect of nonchalant simplicity and generally is worn with a hat.

Lanvin's black tulle and taffeta town tailleur are among the outstanding designs. They combine an instep-length skirt and jacket with a blouse of scarlet taffeta or white organdy and are worn with off-the-face hats in the same fabric as the suit.

Other designers have launched tailleurs in rustling navy blue taffeta with blouses of plaid or flowered organdy, or taffeta woven with a metal thread.

The blouses are generally designed with fairly high necklines and a suggestion of sleeves to fit into the informal atmosphere of the suit.

Gold or silver shimmer appears in some of the more formal models. One designer combines a blue violet crepe skirt and big sleeved jacket with a gold lame blouse, and another unites a black and white striped net suit with a silver lame blouse.

Lacy designs, too. Soft, lacy designs also are seen. Molyneux fashions a beige lace frock having a long tailed brown and nautarium gold of chiffon with a five-eighths-length lace jacket, and another designer combines a smoky blue crepe suit with a chiffon blouse of the same hue.

For resort and country wear, linen and taffeta are combined in one of the most striking informal evening costumes of the season. The ankle-length skirt is of white linen, the short sleeved blouse of geatin blue and white plaid taffeta and the loose hip-length coat of the same material.

The hats which go with the town tailleurs are either very large or very small, broad brimmed straws with flat crowns and small off-the-face taffeta models are both in vogue.

Hobart Bosworth And Stella Adams Reunited in Film

HOLLYWOOD — Miss Stella Adams was doing right well in stock, and she was just a trifle upset at the suggestion that she should take part in one of those "moving pictures," even though opposite such a stage star as Hobart Bosworth.

"Mr. Boggs," she told the movie director who approached her, "do you think I'm going to run up and down the streets, all painted up, for the populace to gaze at?"

But Francis Boggs reassured her, and Stella Adams made her debut in motion pictures — May 8, 1908.

Twenty-five years ago that was, and it was an auspicious date. "The Power of the Sultan," in one reel, made in two days in the back yard of a Chinese laundry, was the first film ever produced in Los Angeles.

Meet 35 Years Later Twenty-five years later to the day, Hobart Bosworth and Stella Adams were reunited in a picture. It was on location for "Whom The Gods Destroy" that Bosworth recalled the significance of the date — and discovered Stella Adams, his one-time leading lady, among the character players in his company.

Bosworth in that quarter of a century had remained in films, becoming an established name and at one time a star. Miss Adams, after making several "features" like "Power of the Sultan," had gone back to the stage.

But she returned, and from 1911 to 1916 she was a well-paid featured character actress on the Christie payroll beginning at the old Nestor studio which were the first in Hollywood. She retired then for 10 years, but returned to take occasional roles in pictures.

Miss Adams, a pleasant, matronly type now, smiles as she recalls some of the details of the first production. Pictures even then, she remarks, borrowed themes from current events. There had been some historic events in Turkey — she has forgotten their nature now — and "Power of the Sultan" was made to "capitalize on public interest." She played a girl who was held captive in a Turkish harem, to be rescued by dashing Hobart Bosworth. Tom Santschi, later a noted screen actor but now dead, was also in the cast.

Has No Regrets "The actors did a little bit of everything, besides acting," she recalls. "Tom Santschi, for instance, used to help build the scenery. Sets? We really hadn't any. The scenery was just painted on a back-drop. When we opened a door, the walls, chairs, tables, everything waved in the breeze!"

Had she remained in films instead of retiring, Miss Adams might have maintained a degree of fame and even become a character star in the talkies.

But she has no regrets. "One never knows what would have been the results if one had followed a different course — and I never regret anything!"

Incidentally, Hobart Bosworth in "Power of the Sultan" broke a precedent—he insisted on doing his own sword-play for the film instead of using a double. Boggs, the director, was killed shortly afterward by an oriental gardener.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TWICE WINCHESTER, Va. (AP)—Lightning struck the home of Mrs. Thomas S. Crockett near here and plunged the house into darkness, although no serious damage was done. About the same time a bolt struck on another farm she owned some distance away and killed two horses.

The earliest known description of the Maya ruins in Yucatan, dating from about 1630, was found in the Vatican library.
