Nelson and McLaughlin Also Report Pendleton Enthusiastic Over Coming Event.

A "Daylight Mardi Gras" that is what La Granders and the thousands of visitors here for the second day of the semi-centennial U. P. celebration in July will enjoy. A definite change in the program for Friday, July 20, was made at a meeting last night, and the new program is generally expected to meet with unqualified approval.

In brief, the program from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m. will be staged downtown on Adams avenue, including high class vaudeville, singing, etc., made up by four American Legion drum corps and two bands, a speaking program late in the afternoon and their features. All in all, it will be a big afternoon of fun.

The carnival, which will be in La Grande the week of July 18-21, inclusive, and which will not operate when counter attractions are being staged by the celebration committee, will be allowed to operate full swing during Friday afternoon, thus providing additional entertainment. This carnival, it is said, is the biggest show of its kind to appear here in years.

CELEBRATION IN ENTERPRISE JULY 3 AND 4

Scores of Local People to Attend — Independence Day to Be Quiet One in La Grande.

With the Fourth of July only four days away, La Granders are making plans already for observance of the day which will be a national holiday. Scores of local people are planning to go to Enterprise, other scores to Baker, and hundreds will go fishing, motoring, swimming, or engage in some other pastime more to their liking.

Enterprise, which has the leading celebration in Union and Wallowa counties on July 4, elected Marjorie Bornstedt queen of the celebration this week. Hilda Herzog was in second place in the final count of votes.

Plans are under way for a huge street parade at Enterprise, with the committee promising it will be unusually long and varied. Several business concerns which never have put floats in the parade in the past are preparing to be represented this year.

The parade will form at the Snyder Lumber company and will start moving promptly at 1:30 o'clock. It will come north to Main street, east on Main to River street, south on River to Grant street, east on Grant to East First street, north on East First to North street, west on North to River street, south on River to Main, west

Union, La Grande Baseball Teams Battle Tomorrow

Union and La Grande, traditional rivals for athletic supremacy, will meet here tomorrow afternoon on the diamond at the La Grande stadium in a baseball game scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock. Both have strong entries in the Blue Mountain league, and a close, hard-fought contest seems certain, fans say.

La Grande is fighting to close the season with no further defeats, hopeful that someone may nick Baker's record and thus give this city's team a tie for the title. Union, now in the cellar with four straight losses, is hopeful of belting La Grande strong enough to break into the win column.

The tentative lineup for tomorrow's game follows: Courtney, pitcher; Woodie, catcher; Stotter or Sullivan, first base; C. Wilson, second; Hyde, short; Evans, third; D. Wilson, left field; Hall, right field; Cochran, center field. There is some doubt, however, whether Cochran will be able to play and if not another change will be necessary. Both infield and outfield showed up well in a stiff practice last night, and the players are confident they will be able to take Union into camp Sunday.

By H. C. Hunter
WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP)—Despite President Roosevelt's avowed plan of making no political speeches en route to or from Hawaii, it was pleasant news to Democratic representatives and senators from the Pacific Northwest when it leaked out that the president expected to land in Portland, about August 1, and visit the Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams, now under construction on the Columbia river.

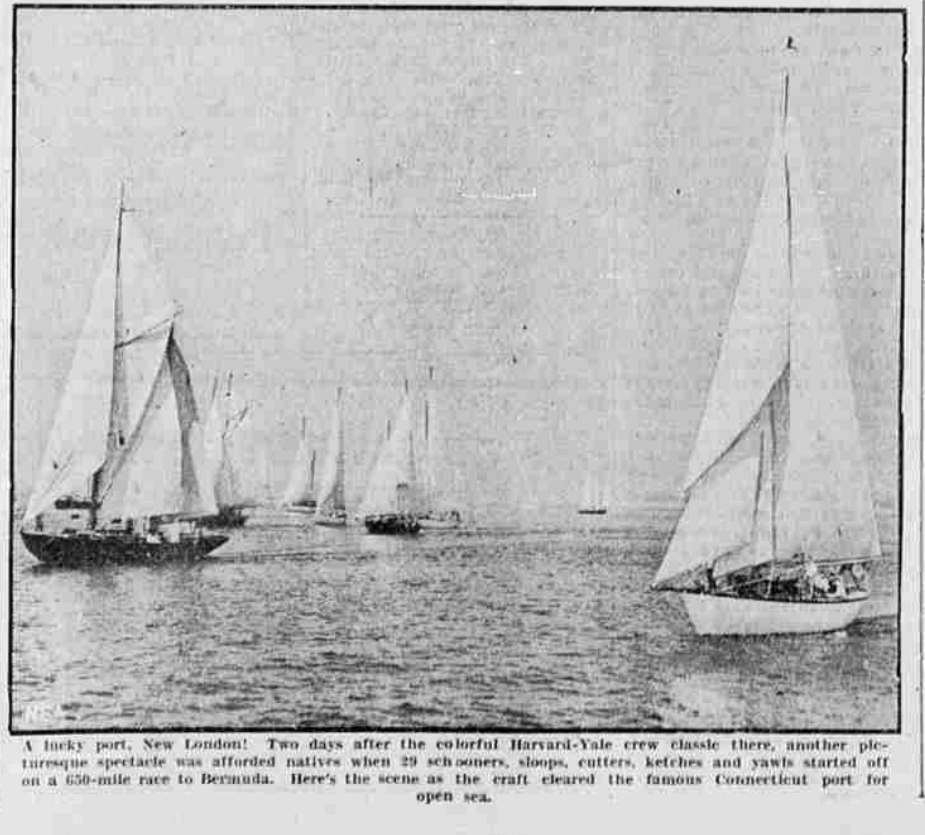

Although nothing official has been given out, it was learned in congressional corridors that the president at present plans to land in Portland and after a short address at the dock, drive by automobile to Bonneville, where he expects to make his first formal address en route east from Hawaii.

After inspecting Bonneville, the party will go to the Grand Coulee dam site, in North Central Washington, to inspect that project, it was reported.
