Northside Improvement Club Hears Program of Entertainment And Flower Discussions Yesterday

Thirty-one women enjoyed the meeting of the Northside Improvement club with the second ward L. D. S. church as the place of meeting Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Price, the president now, had charge of the meeting. The entertainment feature was a dance — "The Spring Flower Dance" — prettily given by some of the primary girls, Della Thompson, Maxine Sinden, Betty June Handrickson, Phyllis and Dorothy Combs and LaVelle Haws, with Miss Ila Mae Andrews accompanying them on the piano.

For the flower discussion, Mrs. Carroll talked on "Flowers and Symbols," Mrs. Mary E. Morris on "The Meaning of Flowers," Lenora Coalwell on "Ordering and Planting the Best Bulb and Seeds," and Mother Price "Flowers and Containers Should Harmonize." After the program a group of the members went to Mrs. Price's home and worked on the float which the club will enter in the parade. Sweet peas being the club flower and pink and green, their colors, these will be followed in making the float.

Greece Delays Women's Votes

ATHENS (AP)—Feminist hopes that women would be given full suffrage in the next general election were dashed when the government held that the time for such a change was not ripe. The women will, therefore, vote only in municipal elections. ### SUMMER IS PARTY TIME FOR YOUNG ENTERTAINERS

Summer is a good time for the children to entertain. It brightens their vacations and helps them to acquire poise in entertaining their guests. If the party food is simple there will be less difficulty in carrying dishes. A large table set on the lawn can be used to serve from. Frequently the guest list contains the names of many children, but the task of serving them must be handled by a few adults. In that case it may be advisable to have the boys wait on the table for the first course and let the girls serve the ice cream and cake.

Many Get Their Style Hints At Movie Theatres

By Robbitt Coombs
HOLLYWOOD—When women movie fans were gawping at the spectacular gowns affected by Gloria Swanson in the days of her stardom in De Mille's gilded films, they simply gawped and let it go at that. They might have envied but they didn't imitate. Few women would have dreamed of adapting for personal use the styles Miss Swanson and her sisters of the cinema displayed. The designs were purposely made extreme. If any new note in fashion were to be on the horizon, the movie stars took it, exaggerated it, and made the customers sit up. Clothes of the screen were fantastic, extravagant, theatrical.

But today there are clothes manufacturers specializing in cinema modes, with one shop in a city given exclusive representation. Shop girls who are on their toes know what a customer means when she says she wants a dress like the one Joan Crawford wore in this film or that, or a hat like Norma Shearer's or Constance Bennett's in a recent picture. Dressing Like The Stars Today's well-dressed women of the screen, therefore, enjoy the responsibility of setting styles that will be "in" months after the day they first wear them on the second stages. The responsibility, of course, falls ultimately upon the studio designers—just like Norma Shearer's or Constance Bennett's in a recent picture.

called a real job on their hands with each new picture. A commercial designer who brings out eight or ten new "creations" a season is doing well. For five recent productions, Orr-Kelly had to put forth 182 gowns. Besides the mere task of figuring out myriad "different" ways to adorn the feminine figure, there is the added difficulty that each actress has a different personality, and a different role in each picture. Gowns For Jean Muir When Jean Muir was assigned to "A Lady Surrenders," she had worn on the screen a total of perhaps seven "changes." In both "A Modern Hero" and "As The Earth Turns" there was little opportunity for a stylist to exercise his talents, because of the limitations of the roles. In the new film she gets 22 changes. Twenty-two new gowns for a new personality—that means an assignment of no mean proportions, and incidentally a job of the sort these movie designers like. The star in question hasn't been the inspiration of any other designer. It's a "new job."
