ERECT FLAGPOLE AND FLAG ON TOP OF MOUNT EMILY
The American Legion and Lions club completed work yesterday in erecting a flagpole and raising Old Glory on the peak of Mt. Emily, in honor of the Leary family and other pioneers of the valley. The flagpole, 60 feet tall, is set in a rock crib five feet high and eight feet square, which is painted white, and is built to last for half a century. The flag, donated by the legion, is five by nine feet, and is on a special fixture that could be replaced only by a lineman. The work was completed Friday the 13th.

The dedication will take place at the foot of Mt. Emily tomorrow in conjunction with the dedication of the pioneer memorial at the Old Heron place.

It is reported the road to the top of Mt. Emily is in good condition, and that before the U. P. celebration, a road from the tower to the flagpole will be completed.

ONE FORM OF INDIVIDUALISM
It is customary, these days, to say that we are having an "epidemic" of strikes. Historians talk learnedly about how labor troubles always accompany a business revival, and economists compute the losses suffered by employers, workers, and the public through such disturbances; but what we fail to realize is that the whole troubled labor picture is giving us a first-rate object lesson.

For a strike, when you stop to think about it, is nothing more or less than an outbreak of this "individualism" we have been hearing so much about lately. It stands, that is to say, for the utter lack of any kind of public control over the parties or the industries involved.

To be a little more accurate, it indicates the complete absence of any kind of planning in the particular economy where the strike takes place. It is a sign that the industry is drifting along with the stream; that both sides are thinking of their problem in the terms of immediate personal and not in terms of long-run public interest. One must hasten to add that it is only natural that they should do so. The industrialist must first of all be concerned with his profit-and-loss figures; the worker has to think first of all of his pay envelope. To expect them voluntarily to do anything else would be to anticipate the millennium.

But the point is that the strike, with all the waste that it involves, is simply the price we pay for the rule of individualism in our economic life. One of the things that makes us loath to realize the fact that when you start talking about the alternatives to industrial individualism you begin to get into deep waters. The people of America see no very good reason why they should copy either the Italian or the Russian method of handling such things.

Conly as strikes may be, most of us would prefer to put up with them rather than to get rid of them via either Communism or Fascism. But that needn't prevent us from facing the facts. Nor need it prevent us from continuing our effort to discover whether there isn't some way of so modifying the rule of individualism that its benefits can be retained while its costly drawbacks can be discarded.

CONTEST FOR QUEEN ENDS THIS EVENING
when announcement of the winner will be made during the "coronation" dance at Zuber hall.

At noon today all candidates must have all votes checked in and a preliminary count will be made, and the contestants notified of their standings. Then each girl will have until 11 p. m. tonight to muster additional votes. At 11 o'clock sharp the contest closes, and the announcement will be made at the dance as quickly as final standings can be ascertained.

At the last counting Faye Walker was leading with Lorraine Dodge a fairly close second.

Rehearsal for events to take place next week, particularly the Saturday pageant, are going ahead now. Hugh E. Brady will put the historical characters through their parts tomorrow.

Capt. Walter A. Bean and George Bean, the committee handling the stage holdup, had a rehearsal last night and expect the event to be a thriller. A boy from Texas has been obtained to do a rolling fall from a horse during the scene.

Cherry Packing Is Resumed At Co-op
Stackland reports that he sent out seven cars, mostly blacks. There were 9000 packed boxes. For this amount of packed fruit he bought 150 tons of fruit. And fruit from outside of the valley culled heavier than that grown here, and as there was no way of taking care of the cull stuff it was all waste. Stackland handled nearly all the cherries in Union county other than that handled by the co-operative plant in Cove. The Pacific Fruit had about six tons, and the remainder went to Stackland.

MISSING REVOLVER
IT WAS a squat roll of old stair carpet. There was a scorched hole through the tough fabric and a further search showed a scar on the whitewashed boards where the spent bullet had hit.

"We're on the right road now," Harper exclaimed excitedly. "If we could only find that steel-jacket bullet, we'd have our proof complete."

"I'm afraid the killer would hold on to that," was Lafferty's surmise. "There's a natural urge to get rid of that sort of evidence," Harper countered, "and I'm counting on that."

They swung their flashlight about at random. "What's in that little cubby-hole over there?" Lafferty poked his head down. "Logs for the fireplace," he announced.

They moved those from one side of the narrow bin to the other but found nothing hidden beneath them. Harper flashed his light around the sides of the bin and the beam came to rest on a rough board barrier set flush in the wall.

The detective unfastened the rusty hooks and pulled it free, after a struggle. A dark space filled with rubble was revealed, greeting them with a damp, musty odor.

"That must be the space under the front steps," said Harper. Lafferty suddenly raised his hand. "Listen!" he whispered. "There's some one on the stairs. I heard a board creak!"

He tiptoed silently in that direction, while Harper snapped off the light and listened, waiting. In a little while Lafferty returned, disgruntled. "There wasn't a soul in sight," he growled. "but I'm sure somebody was listening in."

"I'm going to look in that hole," Harper declared. "Give me a boost up to the ledge." With his assistant's aid he scrambled on to the shoulder-high ledge. Thrusting the torch ahead, he crawled forward on his knees. Lafferty heard a grunt of disgust as he brushed aside a black thing that crawled out from under a discolored lump of mortar.

There was a cry of scramble backward, and Harper slid down to the cellar floor in a shower of small stones and dirt. His clothes were soiled with lime and the soft, mossy dirt, and his hands were brushing at the thick cobwebs caught around his head and shoulders, but in his stained fingers he held a lump of metal.

"Carlin was right!" he exclaimed. "It was a discharged .45 caliber steel-jacket bullet!"

"Right there, buried under those handkerchiefs!" Lafferty pointed to the open drawer of the highboy in Pierre Dufresne's dressing-room. There was probably nothing there now but the neatly stacked handkerchiefs.

"I couldn't be mistaken about anything as important as that. It was not an automatic, but a heavy caliber revolver. Andrews was looking for Dufresne's extra pairs of glasses and they were in the drawer on the other side. The gun was not in a holster. I'd bet a month's pay the bullets would be 45's."

"I don't get that at all," Harper amended. "We went off by ourselves and made an important discovery that has to do with the gun used for this crime. No one knew anything about our suspicions, yet when we return to this room less than an hour later the revolver has been spirited away. That's more than a coincidence!"

Harper looked through the other drawers in the highboy. The contents were in meticulous order and it was apparent at a glance that nothing as bulky as the revolver Lafferty had described could be hidden there now.

To be doubly sure that Lafferty and he had overlooked nothing, Harper went through the drawers once more, and gave the pleasant room a hasty general search before either spoke again. There was nothing.

"Don't forget," Lafferty advised drily, "that there was a noise on the stairs while we were poking around the cellar. Some one in this house is trying to keep an eye on us. I think it's Andrews. That fellow can move around with less noise than a snake."

"If that was the revolver we're looking for," Harper went on, "I

Acting as counsellors for the camp will be Art Steffen, Fred Gehring, R. Baxter and several other scouts. Others who will assist on days when they are able to attend the camp, but who will be unable to be there for the full time are Harvey Carter, Dave Stoddard, Grant Bean, R. McAnulty, J. Smurthwaite and others. This staff will also be in charge of the Wallowa Lake camp in August.

Registrations for the camp began Friday and are being received at the chamber of commerce office. The registration fee is 50c and at the time of registering, all boys are expected to indicate in what way they expect to pay their expenses at the camp, whether in cash or in some other way. Food or produce are being accepted at all or part payment, but arrangements must be made early if this plan is to be followed, according to Stevenson.

Murder at MOCKING HOUSE
BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: Reverend, leaves his found two bits of evidence to support his theory that the two were found shot to death in Pierre Dufresne's breakfast room did not shoot each other, in spite of appearances. The fact that a certain bullet does not fit a certain water-tight slot, the other is a drop of water in a glass. Now he has found where the murderer obtained the spent bullet he substituted for the one actually used.

MISSING REVOLVER
IT WAS a squat roll of old stair carpet. There was a scorched hole through the tough fabric and a further search showed a scar on the whitewashed boards where the spent bullet had hit.

"We're on the right road now," Harper exclaimed excitedly. "If we could only find that steel-jacket bullet, we'd have our proof complete."

ERECT FLAGPOLE AND FLAG ON TOP OF MOUNT EMILY
The American Legion and Lions club completed work yesterday in erecting a flagpole and raising Old Glory on the peak of Mt. Emily, in honor of the Leary family and other pioneers of the valley. The flagpole, 60 feet tall, is set in a rock crib five feet high and eight feet square, which is painted white, and is built to last for half a century. The flag, donated by the legion, is five by nine feet, and is on a special fixture that could be replaced only by a lineman. The work was completed Friday the 13th.

ERECT FLAGPOLE AND FLAG ON TOP OF MOUNT EMILY
The American Legion and Lions club completed work yesterday in erecting a flagpole and raising Old Glory on the peak of Mt. Emily, in honor of the Leary family and other pioneers of the valley. The flagpole, 60 feet tall, is set in a rock crib five feet high and eight feet square, which is painted white, and is built to last for half a century. The flag, donated by the legion, is five by nine feet, and is on a special fixture that could be replaced only by a lineman. The work was completed Friday the 13th.
