

SPECTROSCOPE IS USED TO PREDICT DEATH OF HUMANS

By Howard W. Blakeslee (Associated Press Science Editor) CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—The spectroscopic method which records the birth and decay of stars, can also foretell the approaching death of man. The spectroscopic death curve, which forecast a human death more accurately than the physicians, was described to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology spectroscopic conference, meeting here to discuss both practical and scientific uses of this instrument. The report was made by P. and M. Lacombe de Nouy, of the Pasteur Institute, France. M. De Nouy did not attend, but mailed his paper to Professor George R. Harrison, chairman of the conference. The death curve was found in a spectroscopic examination of human blood. Spectroscopic curves are like city skylines, such as New York and London, which reveal wide architectural differences, which never would be mistaken for each other, and which an expert would never forget. In this way the Pasteur Institute scientists and his colleagues have been studying the structural nature of blood. They have analyzed, he reported, about 8000 samples. These included the blood of men, horses and sheep.

We predicted a man's death, which followed in 24 hours. He was partly paralyzed, owing to a malignant tumor of the spine, with metastases in the lower jaw, and urinary infection. He was expected to live, however, for many months," the report said.

Texans Fearful Horse Wagering Law Is Doomed

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Present indications are that horse race betting, which has been legal in Texas less than a year, will face a hard fight for survival when the state legislature convenes six months hence. One of the leading candidates for governor is emphasizing his stand for repeal of the law permitting race-track wagers. Others are silent but friends of racing fear that some of them might sign a repeal bill. Groups of citizens are participating in a movement to elect legislators opposed to race betting. Many of those favoring repeal of the law state that wagering at the tracks is not so bad in itself but argue that it has given Texans the gambling fever with the result that they patronize illegal bookmaking establishments, or turn to dice or roulette at night clubs. Tracks already have been built at Houston, Galveston, San Antonio, Arlington (between Dallas and Fort Worth), and Dallas. There is a possibility that one will be opened this winter in the lower Rio Grande valley. Each meet draws persons from miles around. Those who favor continuation of racing concede that it is possible that a majority of the next legislature will vote for repeal. They express confidence, however, that the repeals won't have the two-thirds majority necessary to pass a bill over the governor's veto. That is why they are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the gubernatorial race, which will be determined in the Democratic run-off primary late in August.

BLOOMIN' BIKE RIDERS INVADE LONDON AGAIN!

LONDON (AP)—Another attempt is to be made to popularize six-day bicycle racing in England. Although this sport is popular in most European countries it has as yet failed to find favor with the British public. Olympia, the large London hall used for horse-shows, boxing matches, and similar events, is to house the wooden cycle track, which will be eight laps to the mile and have 53 degree banking. An attempt is being made to include an English team but the death of home talent is giving the promoters of the affair more than a little worry.

HOOK AND EYE LAKE DELTON, Wis. (AP)—Fred Tillet caught a fish the other day—one of the largest ever seen in these parts—without a bite.

He made his cast and watched a huge northern pike swim past the lure, missing it completely. An instant later there was a lurch, lunge on his tackle. After a short fight, Fred landed the pike, which weighed 17½ pounds and was more than three feet long. The hook was securely imbedded in the fish's eye.

HIS LA GOYA SEEN 'AT THE RACES'

PARIS (AP)—Henrietta Lady Davis attended the races one day here wearing a dark gray costume in the new pebbled material called "cobblestone." With the costume, designed by Schiaparelli, she wore a black suede belt, gloves and bag and a broad-brimmed hat with a tapering crown modeled after the Spanish hats seen in Goya's paintings.

Large advertisement for Bond's Transfer. Text: '"I GOT THE RECIPE FROM AN ADVERTISEMENT IN YESTERDAY'S PAPER" COOKING is a science in which discoveries are constantly being made. Even the most colorless food staple is liable to have the spotlight turned upon it. Take salt pork for example—wouldn't it surprise you to know that it is a wonderful basic ingredient for a savory tomato sauce? It is not necessary to buy cook-books to keep up with new culinary secrets and recipes. By means of newspaper advertisements, they come to you regularly from the kitchens of food manufacturers and distributors. And because these recipes are tested over and over again before they are released to the public, you can follow their instructions with complete confidence. As you study these recipes you will be impressed by these facts—they are appropriate for the time of the year in which they appear; they call for inexpensive ingredients; they are in harmony with modern rules for health and nutrition; and finally, they are not difficult to follow. Yes, it pays to read food advertisements for the facts they contain. It pays to read the recipes for new ideas. You'll be wise if you cut them out for your recipe file. But above all you'll be delighted if you try one of those recipes right away.'
