tion and weighing under 90 pounds, had prayed to the last that the "portals of mercy" which the court of last resort had spoken of only two days ago as her only hope, would be opened. The governor, however, declined to interfere.

She had said they would have to carry her. Two guards picked her up and took a few steps. She struggled down then, and walked the rest of the way, a bit defiantly, drawing on a reserve of nerve which doctors had said she did not have. At 10:16 p. m. she was dead.

Samuel Parcell, 43, came next. He entered sullenly, as one who feels he is punished for another's fault. "I'm going to the chair, all right," he said, "but I'm innocent. That's all I've got to say—and thank you, for nothing."

Finally came Vincent Saetta, 23. He was cheerful. "Hello, guard," he called out. He was the worst of the three, to hear him tell it, yet if Vincent Saetta could have had his way, he would have paid for Salvatore Antonio's murder alone. "The woman, she had nothing to do with it. Parace? I don't know. It was dark. I didn't see him do nothing. But the woman, no, no."

Mrs. Antonio persisted in her innocence. Before she died, however, she told Warden Lewis Laetta:

"I did not tell those men to kill my husband for his insurance money of $5,000. I could have killed him a dozen times. The house was always full of dope and guns. One of these men came to me and said they were going to kill my husband, and I said: 'I do not care what happens to my husband. I care only for my three children.'"

Salvatore Antonio was murdered April 15, 1932. On May 4 of the same year his wife, Parace and Saetta were arrested and made confessions, later retracted.

Seaman, who during the last three years have retired to other employment, are reported as indications point to an increase in shipping.
