The drive is being conducted by individuals and Mrs. Esther Hildebrand offered a first and second prize for the individuals who brought in the largest and second largest number of applications for membership.

It also was announced today that the annual Sacajawea trophy handicap tournament will be played at the club Aug. 25 and 26. Youngest World War Vet Is Only 29 Years of Age

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—John Ward Ruffe, who at the age of 29 years was initiated into the ranks of the veterans of foreign wars, has laid modest claim to being the youngest veteran of the World war.

He hadn't mentioned it much before, he said, because "I knew a lot of people wouldn't believe me," but family documents disclose that Ruffe was of the tender age of 11 years, 9 months and one day when he sailed into the enlistment office at Vancouver barracks on Oct. 20, 1916.

He had, he said, become "fed up" on routine work in an Aberdeen, Wash., box factory.

Ruffe's 79-year-old father vouches for the age of the young veteran, and there's a birth certificate for him some place in the archives of South Denver-Gardens, a town near Denver, Colo.

"A recruiting officer first asked me in Aberdeen if I wanted to go to war," young Ruffe related. "He said 'you're 17, aren't you?' and I answered 'yes,' and proceeded to join."

Ruffe was sent to the Philippines early in the war and later spent a year and a half in Siberia.

Accent The Neck Is Newest Cry of Fashion

(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS (AP)—Accent the neck! is the style world's slogan for the "in-between-times" frocks it has designed for late August and September wear.

Big bold cravats which fluff out under the chin like those worn by the Directorate "Incroyables" (men who dressed in extreme styles in the 1790's), necklines which pull a bit to one side, cockleshell and anchor clips all appear to draw the eye to a point between chin and shoulder on frocks designed for wear until real winter styles are on the market.

Contrast With Frock

The cravats, sometimes taffeta, sometimes knitted wool, are apt to appear in a color which contrasts with that of the frock, as a rose and black plaid on a black frock and an almond green on cocoa clips, apparently under the theory "two are happier than one," almost always appear in pairs, one snapped to each corner of a square neckline or to each side of a round one. Diamond shells, gold anchors and silver darts are favorites.

The frocks themselves are cut on the simplest lines. Silhouettes are neither ultra-straight nor ultra-fitted, but fashioned on a slender narrow profile which has no marked fullness anywhere. A few designers like sleeves with fullness just below the shoulder but many prefer, for September wear, an almost straight line. Belts on these simple early-fall

McPherson and daughters, Ruby June and Joyce expect to leave very early tomorrow morning for Turner, Ore., where Dr. McPherson will attend the executive committee meetings of the Oregon Christian Endeavor Union which begins tomorrow afternoon. was taken up in detail. Of the countries represented only Argentina and Canada were taking what delegates described as an "aggressive attitude." Neither the United States nor Australia will require export allowances as large as had been estimated earlier this year, it was stated.

Pointing out that quotas will apply to both wheat and wheat flour, it was said in American quarters that the United States will require a small allowance "as we must export some flour."

The full commission adjourned to 11 a. m. tomorrow. It is now certain meetings will continue next week.

MURDER AT MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: While trying to puzzle out the identity of the person who murdered a policeman and a stranger in Pierre Dufresne's house, Sergeant Harper has discovered that a set of threatening letters sent Dufresne was written on paper taken from his house, and that at the time Ellen Becker, a maid, left the Dufresne employ here had been in contact with her master and mistress. Harper is questioning the Dufresne gardener.

Chapter 40 ELLEN BECKER

"WAS there anything between Becker and young Donaghy?" Harper asked, with quick perception.

Whitmore pulled on his pipe while he meditated. "Well, sometimes I thought yes and sometimes no."

"When did she leave?"

"The middle of November. I remember, because we're paid on the 15th and 30th, and the 15th was her last pay."

"Where is she working now?"

"I don't know. She never wrote to anybody nor came back to see us. She had an uncle who ran a little grocery store somewhere in the city, and that's all I ever heard about her family. She did tell me his name once, but I've forgotten, except that it wasn't Becker. Ellen wasn't much for talking about her own affairs, although she had a lot of ideas like Joe about rich people. Whitmore laughed. "Maybe she went out and got herself a rich widower."

A rapping at the door afforded Harper a graceful way of bringing the prolonged interview to an end.

When the detective opened the door he found the same brisk young man who had run down the origin of the dead man's disguise so successfully. Whitmore went out and the man from the Central Bureau entered, handing over a batch of reports from Headquarters. "Nothing very important in these, I'm afraid, Sergeant," he commented.

"I'm glad you came up, Harris," Harper replied. "I liked the way you handled that Pagliotti matter. I'm going to give you another assignment, a harder one this time."

Young Harris sat silent and alert while Harper thought over bits of John Whitmore's talk. So there had been a serious quarrel between Pierre Dufresne and his wife in November. A quarrel inspired by jealousy, real or fancied.

Whitmore thought that Ellen Becker was prying and sly and that there may have been something between Donaghy and her. On the 15th of that month Ellen had departed, somewhat mysteriously. On the 19th had come the first threatening letter.

Then, on the day after the murders Donaghy had been surprised with a pocketful of money, as a result of "backing the right horse." Were these facts linked in a chain or not?

SERGEANT HARPER looked into Harris' keen eyes and spoke decisively. "Harris, there was a maid in this house named Ellen Becker. She left last November 15th. I want her present address. All I can tell you is that she had an uncle who ran a grocery store, but his name was not Becker. When you get her address, camp outside until I can get there. If there's anything in my tip, she may be warned to skip out of the city. I leave all the details to you, Harris, but find Ellen Becker."

"Yes, sir," Harris took up his overcoat and hat and departed. Harper pressed the button, and when Andrews appeared asked him to send in Donaghy.

Monday, Donaghy "blows up."

gowns are generally quite important. Box calf cut in a wide plaque in front with a silver dagger thrust through, patent leather designs with a plaque of leather leaves in front, and little narrow string belts no larger than a finger are all being seen.

The frocks themselves are generally made of one or two fabrics; (1) soft wools or (2) silk or artificial crepes, often with a pebbled grain. Among such dark colors as black, navy blue and rich brown are a number of bright hues such as grass green and tomato red. Multi-colored wools are also seen in such combinations as gray splashed with red and white dots. Crepe frocks designed for more formal wear generally appear in sober tones.

$1,300 to be paid the 4-H organization of the state for all expense in connection with the fair.

The 4-H scholarships are awarded highest winners in various divisions of exhibits and entitle the club members to tuition, board and room at the annual 4-H summer school at Corvallis. So small wonder club members bring plenty of keen and friendly rivalry to their fair realm.

As in the past, 4-H youths will have not only their own display building for cooking, sewing, art, canning, handicraft and other exhibits, but will have also meeting quarters and livestock exhibition buildings—in all, five are set aside for their use.

Last year Lane and Clackamas and Washington counties headed the list in the number of scholarship winners, with Multnomah county ranking next. Youth from other counties hope to see their county at the head of the list next year, and of course the big winners last year are out to repeat.
