LIFE INSURANCE VS. COMMUNISM

Roger B. Hull recently expressed the interesting opinion that life insurance, with its 21 billions of assets, represents America's first defense against communism. Nothing could be more thoroughly opposed to the communistic plan than life insurance. Under communism, responsibility for one's life and welfare is placed upon the state—the individual has no voice in determining his destiny. He is a vassal, subject to ironhanded governmental power.

Life insurance is one of the most pre-eminently individualistic of businesses. It permits the individual to make his own provision for the future of himself and his dependents. It eliminates dependency, upon government or any other agency. It is the answer to the "dole", in any shape or form.

It is not an accident that more than three-quarters of all the life insurance in force in the world has been bought and sold in the United States—most individualistic of nations. Sixty-three millions of our citizens have policies. Each of these policies, as Mr. Hull also said, represents an individual achievement—it means that its owner has voluntarily, through his own efforts, set up a defense against the potential economic dangers of the future.

It is to be hoped that sportsmen going into the forest during this extremely dry season will heed the admonitions of the forest officials, stockmen and leaders of their own organizations to be careful of their cigarettes and pipes. A large percentage of the forest fires of the northwest are "man made" and many are started by a carelessly thrown cigarette. So much has been said in the daily press on the dangers of fire in the forests, that the thought of it should be uppermost in the mind of the average city sportsman when he enters the woods. — Enterprise Record-Chiefman.

The only device Hitler hasn't thought of yet is to have himself nominated by an "independent convention." It will still take Germany a few years to catch up with Oregon. — Eugene Register-Guard.

Nearly two thousand years ago, the founder of Christianity propounded this rule: "Do ye unto other as ye would that others should do unto you." Do you suppose Nazism, or any other of Europe's numerous isms, can offer anything better than that? — Frank Jenkins in Klamath Falls Herald.

Analysis of crop estimates shows that drought crop reduction has exceeded proposed new deal crop reduction considerably. The new dealers have one problem of their hands, for which they should perhaps be more thankful. — Astoria Astorian-Budget.

Wallowa Lake Boys' Camp Activities

The important lakes in the lake basin and also climb some of the higher peaks in the Basin country. They will return to camp on Thursday afternoon. Harry Dawson of Joseph is heading the four-day hikers while Karl Johnson headed the Bear Camp hikers and Woodrow Damerel headed the Lake Basin hikers. Some of the peaks that the four-day hikers will climb are Eagle Cap, Matterhorn and Saajawa.

Tuesday the camp had the misfortune of having its chief cook, Russell Nelson, sick. However Arthur Steffen, the second cook, carried on very well and the food was up to its usual high standard.

Bob McMillen, camp bugler, is on the four-day hike. While he is away, Stuart Wyldie is bugling.

At campfire the other night, tent No. 2, under Dick Larkin, put on a clever take-off on the camp staff under the title "Things we can do without in camp."

The Sunday ice cream donated to the camp by R. F. Tyler of the Blue Mountain creamery was very much enjoyed by the boys. Our hearty thanks, Mr. Tyler.

The lifesavers are getting a great kick out of the canoe loaned by Walter Dutil of Enterprise. It is in use through most of the afternoon each day.

Jack Farbes is teaching the boys the proper method of rowing a boat. Most of them pull a pretty good oar now. Tommy Cook started on the long hike but was turned back by a nail in his shoe. Tough luck!

Eugene Palmer's dad and grand-dad came to see him on Monday. They had been grouse hunting with H. E. Talow and called on their way back. Eugene and Junior Reynolds hiked up to Bear Camp on the West Fork of the Wallowa to join the rest of the boys who were camped there under the leadership of Karl Johnson.

State College Expecting Gain In Enrollment

CORVALLIS, Ore. (Special)—With freshman week, the introduction to the regular fall term, only a month away, workmen are busily engaged in getting the Oregon State college campus and buildings ready for what is expected to be a somewhat larger number of students than were at the college last year. A crew of workers has been on the job most of the summer painting and making necessary repairs, the first on many of the buildings for several years.

five years. The preponderance of the requests for information ask about the possibilities of obtaining employment. He says. Many of the prospective students declare they will not be able to attend college this fall unless they have some financial assistance. Although the federal government, through the state emergency relief administration, will distribute nearly $3500 a month to needy students at the college, this and other agencies will be hard pressed to meet the great demand for student employment, Mr. Lemon believes.

Freshman week, a period set aside for beginning students to become oriented and to have plenty of time to consult with their advisers, will begin Monday, Sept. 24 and close the following Saturday. Sophomore, juniors and seniors will register Saturday, Sept. 29 and regular class work will begin Monday, Oct. 1.

Earnings the corresponding period last year were $190,585, or 95 cents a share.
