RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENT SIGNED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 (AP) — A reciprocal trade agreement with Cuba in which the United States made slashing reductions in tariff duties on sugar and other Cuban products including rum, tobacco and winter vegetables in return for a radical Cuban trimming of her duties on land and scores of other American products was signed late Friday at the state departments.

The agreement, the first drawn under executive powers accorded the president by congress in June, is hoped by the administration to prove the stimulus to restore the once flourishing trade between the two countries, and also the forerunners for many other such agreements to rebuild America's export markets.

Dolores' Bobbed Hair Gave Her Role She Wanted

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Dulcet-voiced Dolores del Rio is philosophical about the metamorphosis that has taken her from native girl parts to a modern woman on the screen.

"Bobbing my hair did it," she explains. "That, and a bit of luck."

"I thought I'd never get my chance to wear pretty clothes in pictures," she confided. "You see, I had been a half-caste girl in the movies for so long that nobody could visualize me as anything else."

This was a confession from one of the best dressed women on the screen. She played a primitive girl in "The Bird of Paradise," and from then on she remained a primitive girl.

"Once you undress before the cameras you must keep it up," she said. "My first picture, "The Bird of Paradise," was a great success, judged by its box office appeal. It was previewed at Santa Barbara. The critics were lavish in their praise. The picture was almost my undoing, however, I was typed.

"I hated those roles, but it wasn't until recently I had my chance to play anything else. I used to feel so gay at parties in my evening clothes. I worried constantly, though, wondering why the directors wouldn't give me modern parts. I'd stand in front of a mirror at home and ask myself what was wrong.

"I finally decided to bob my hair. No sooner had I reached that conclusion than the job was done. Really, it was the 'open sesame' to a new career on the screen. I had a bit of luck along about that time, it is true, but I had removed myself from any possibility of being cast as a native girl."

Dolores' climb has been steady and sure since. Her latest picture, "Madame Du Barry," she considers her very best.

"Ever since I thought of acting I've always wanted to play Du Barry," she said. "It is a grand part, and I enjoyed so much making it."

REV. HOLMES WILL PREACH

Rev. Miss Holmes, of the Louise Rescue Home of Portland, will preach Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at the Church of the Nazarene, it was announced today.

SAUCES AND CUSTARDS

In making tomato stew or tomato sauce, the cover should be left off in cooking. That will prevent the tomatoes from burning and adhering to the bottom of the tin.

When making cup custards, scald the milk slightly at the start and the custards will cook in half the time, so that you will be using your oven for a shorter period and the job may be accomplished more quickly.

Meat and vegetable stock should be saved, as it is useful in making soups and sauces.

USING IMAGINATION

Combining frozen sherbets and ice cream seems to be a popular summer idea. For instance, French vanilla ice cream blends well with orange sherbet and the color combination is pretty, too. Raspberry ice is delicious served with pineapple ice cream or sherbet and the colors of mint sherbet and raspberry ice cream are bound to have a cooling effect as well as delicious flavor. Use your imagination when you look over your ice cream dealer's wares.

Strong Pepper Seeds

Always thoroughly rinse out green peppers to remove seeds as they are very strong and one left in the pepper is likely to ruin all the stuffing used for filling the pepper.

Ken Meanan, sensational North-Ken Meenan, sensational Northwill be eligible for Big Ten competition this fall, but not with Northwestern. He will play for Bob Zuppke at Illinois.

Clara K. Young Is Attempting a Film Comeback

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Clara Kimball Young, whose luminous dark eyes thrilled millions in the silent movies, is confident there is a place for her on the screen today—for her and for other old timers whom the public has not forgotten.

Since it became known some time ago that Clara was "broke" and unable to obtain work in pictures, letters from fans have been pouring in. The letters now number, she estimates, 10,000. Their general tenor, she says, is "we want you back, Clara."

"That," she says, "is the most heartening thing that has happened to me in years. To think that I really haven't been forgotten!"

A matronly figure now, Miss Young has allowed her black hair to take its natural course. It is liberally sprinkled with gray. She is plump, but her face is virtually unwrinkled. The famous eyes still sparkle. She wants to play mother roles, grande dames, character parts.

A Real Film Veteran

Producers have not been overly eager to give her work, although Sol Lesser now has her in a matronly role in "The Return of Chandu" and has told her, she says, he'll have more work for her.

A real veteran of the films, Miss Young came to them about 1912 from the stage where she had been since childhood. She was at the old Vitagraph studios with Lillian Walker, Norma Talmadge, Anita Stewart, and other old timers.

"Those," she recalls, "were the days when the public chose its stars. We weren't known or exploited as stars are today. We became stars because the public liked us. What happened to my personal fortune?

"I did earn a lot of money, but in one way or another I failed to receive most of it. In 1916 I was supposed to draw $3000 a week—an enormous salary for the time—but things happened as usual, and I never got it.

'Growing Old Gracefully'

"I've kept busy most of the time, either in pictures or in vaudeville or on the stage, and the response to my stage appearances has been most gratifying.

"But I want to work in pictures. I don't want pity or sympathy. I'd rather have a producer tell me outright, when I apply for a part, that he doesn't want me than to have him beat around the bush to 'spare my feelings'."

Miss Young, a believer in "growing old gracefully," is 43, and has her birth certificate to prove it. "I mention that," she says, "because even 20 years ago I overheard someone remark I had no business playing girls of 23—I was 'too old!'" a candidate for president because of personal duties. This is believed to be the first time in history of the Oregon auxiliary that the vice president has not succeeded to the presidency.

Last night the bathing beauty contest was won by Mildred Dorries, of Portland, over 17 other entries.

Selection of state officers and the 1935 convention city remained for this afternoon, with The Dalles and La Grande in the contest for convention city. La Grande is believed to have committee support in its third attempt to get the state convention, but supporters of The Dalles said early today they believed they had enough votes to override the committee's recommendation if it did not favor the Columbia River city.

Woodburn won the state championship baseball game late Friday, defeating the Portland Post Office Pharmacy team 3 to 0.

President Finds U. S. Business On Upgrade

Both the president and Wallace agreed that while this economic problem must be weighed, there are other factors, such as national defense.

Officials said there was not necessarily any conflict between the president's views on business and the monthly survey of the federal reserve board. This report, issued shortly after the president spoke, showed that declines in some major business indicators during July and early August were greater than usual.

It was pointed out the reserve board contents itself with telling what has happened, making no attempt to foretell the future. It dealt mostly with figures gathered last month and early this month. The president said he had recent information.

minimized, it was said.

The plan of the chamber of commerce is to release parasitized earwigs at the homes of those who have contributed to the fund, hoping that eventually the parasites will spread to all sections of the city.

It was emphasized that if anyone who has not contributed to the fund wishes the parasites to be released at their place, they must be listed among the contributors, of which eight more at $1 each is needed to complete the $45.

Mr. Larson also urged that all who pledged money to the fund but did not pay, bring their pledges to the chamber offices.

Senator Schall Sees F. R. in Censor Scheme

Schall's 650 word reply was issued a few hours later.

"You ask me for 'information' concerning what you yourself have done," it said. "Are you attempting to secure the facts so that you may be in a position to refute yourself?"

"Your telegram to me bears out the suggestion of the constant effort to mislead and fool the public," the Minnesotan, a frequent critic of the administration, wrote. "Your desire to make yourself appear before the people of the United States as a champion of a free press may be as insincere as your promises to the people when you accepted the Democratic nomination at Chicago with the statement that you were for their platform a 100 per cent.

"To date you have not kept one of the covenants you pledged the people at that time. Let me recall your testy anger at your disappointment in keeping out of the press code the expression of a free press.

"For me to chronicle all of the attempts of your administration to throttle the press and free speech—all known to you and approved by you in advance—would be put to recite incidents with which you are entirely familiar. If it were not for the fact that I see in your request for 'information' an attempt on your part to appear as a victim of your own bureaucracy instead of its chief organizer, I would be inclined to ignore your telegram.

"But since you assume a cloak of innocence and since your telegram to me is in the hands of the press, it becomes my duty as a sentinel of the people to do what little I can to mitigate their deception by citing specific evidence of your intention to force a censorship of the press so that your acts and the acts of your communistic bureaucrats might be hidden from the public gaze."

Schall then referred to what he termed "the press censorship bill" passed by the house and killed in the senate during the special session last year, he said that under it a publisher not approved by the administration could have been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, and that Chairman Sumners (D., Tex.) of the house judiciary committee had stated the bill was introduced at the request of the "executive."

Charging "every government department under you is now cloaked in censorship," Schall added that while "a press censorship clause" was stricken from the communications control bill, the measure "still gives you power to inaugurate a government telegraphic news service, under which, as one example, you immediately put out of business three radio stations of Mr. (Henry) Ford."

Lines Creeping Upward In New Shoe Styles

By Rita Ferris
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS (AP) — Lines are creeping upward in new winter shoes for 1934-35.

The low cut court pump and the strapped shoe have been thrust into a back seat by the largest designers, and models which inch higher and higher over the instep, approaching the styles worn in the days of the French revolution, are being shown. Even boots which cover the ankle bone have been designed.

Hooks And Wooden Buckles

Other footnotes recalling the tempestuous days of the eighteenth century appear. Hooks instead of eyelets are used for the laces which fasten a number, and wide wooden buckles, enamelled to match the color of the shoe and studded with copper nail heads or colored stones, ornament others.

The favorite fall footwear for town as yet is the shoe which molds up over the instep as smoothly as a glove fits the hand. Some stop midway over that upward curve of the foot, others almost cover it. In order to keep a smooth unbroken line in front, a number lace on the side, while others fasten with a smart side strap arrangement.

Boots, extending all the way from the ankle bones to midcalf, are the latest excitement. Many designers are fashioning such models for real winter wear, although as yet they have not made their appearance.

'Happy Medium' In Heel

Heel heights are causing a small shoe designers' war. The low heel, which has gained popularity in America, is favored by a few designers, but the rest declare high heels make feet look smaller, and they refuse to lower their models drastically. The consensus appears to be a "happy medium" of somewhat lower heels, but no really flat designs.

Kid promises to be the favorite leather for utilitarian town wear, while suede and antelope are shown for afternoon shoes. Calf appears for sports. Many a model combines two leathers in one shoe. Suedes are worked with swirls of kid and kid with applications of antelope.

Black, as usual, is hailed as the favorite town color, while a warm reddish brown, navy blue and dark gray promise to be popular with clothes in those colors. Dark green, designers say, also will be smart.
