Ask for Exercises After Baby Comes

By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Writer
Dodging the beauty penalties of child-bearing is mostly your job, not your doctor's, but see that he approves your choice of a maternity girdle and an uplift bra—beauty armor for sorely strained muscles.
Your girdle will give you better support if you'll step into it while you are in an upright position, but will lie down to adjust it. Tether your stockings to the suspensory garters. Circular garters are not for you.
Start wearing an uplift bra—the kind your doctor will approve, supports without constricting—as soon as breasts enlarge, and use it until heaviness subsides.
After the baby comes, ask your doctor about post-pregnancy exercises—some women are allowed to take them before they leave the hospital—which will help you regain a school girl figure.

In the Last Week Jesus Came Out in The Full Publicity of His Ministry

Text: Matthew 21:26; 27:1-56

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
If you care to look into it, you will be surprised, as I was, to find how large a part of the Gospels—all four of them—are occupied with the events and discourses of the last week in the life and ministry of Jesus.
It is not only that the events of the last week were of deeper significance, and therefore called for greater space as they dealt with the climax in the sacrificial ministry and the crucifixion; the records reveal much more. For the first time Jesus came out in the full publicity of His ministry, and in all His acts and utterances He committed himself with a completeness that hitherto had been lacking.
When the multitudes had thronged upon him in rural Galilee, He had withdrawn to the mountains, or had taken refuge in a boat and gone across the Sea of Galilee. When he had been acclaimed as the Messiah, "the Son of the Living God," His admission had been "See thou tell no man."
The explanation of the withdrawals, and the escape and the silence was that "His hour had not yet come." But now, conscious that His hour had come, He accepts the plaudits of the throng. Where in rural Galilee He had been restrained, and had held His disciples in restraint, here in the entrance to Jerusalem itself, in the full glare of publicity, as if He were challenging His enemies, He allows himself to be set upon a colt, and to be hailed as "the King that cometh in the name of the Lord," while the people do Him homage, spread palm branches, and cast their garments in the way. It is unlike anything that has happened before.
Nor was this all. Examine the records, and you will find that Jesus spoke and acted with an abandonment of every consideration of safety or expediency, or of concern for the continuance of His ministry. He attacked His enemies as hypocrites in bitter and scornful words; He assailed them and their kind as a "generation of vipers"; He drove the money-changers out of the temple. In fact, if He had deliberately tried to arouse His enemies, He could hardly have done so more effectively than He did in the days immediately following the triumphal entry.
He knew that His hour had come. He was prepared for the final sacrifice. He accepted His destiny. He might have continued His ministry if He had stayed in Galilee and confined His ministry to acts of mercy and healing, and been content to go about doing good; but there were sterner ways of duty and destiny that He must follow. The way of the Cross lay before Him.
Study the events and sayings of the last week, and much that seems mysterious is made plain. How in so few days could sentiment so change that the Jesus of the triumphal entry could be cried "crucify Him" were not the same who cried "Hosanna! Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord."
One would like to think that this is true, and that those who hailed Jesus with such enthusiasm were sincere and not fickle-minded.

FREEDOM requires a FREE PRESS

Democracy is only human. Sometimes it is attracted briefly to greener-looking spots to the right or left. To promising issues... To easier Utopias visioned alluringly by good hearts whose ambition is to plan for men as a mother plans for her children.

Dictator minds can't take this freedom to sting their pet ideas. Their impulses is to liquidate it—sometimes by a procedure not immediately apparent.

In America our courageous and vocal free press has been a principal factor in keeping democracy on the path to ever increasing freedoms. It has helped more than any other method thus far discovery by history.

In these times it is more necessary than ever that the people be kept daily mindful of the importance to them of a free press, and advised of any oblique threats to it. Only thus can the people preserve this freedom, as a continuing guide to all other freedoms.

But in this land of the free, certain men and women, because of an inner urge, dedicate themselves to serving the people by publishing newspapers and magazines. They represent and think ahead for every phase of America's economy. These publishers are in fact a vocal cross-section of our democracy.

This cross-section of democracy attics pins into too roscate dreams. It sharpens the thinking of people on all sorts of questions, by exposing the pros and cons.
