● SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Abraham, a True Pioneer, Inspired Those of Our Country's Early Days
 Scripture: Genesis: Chapters 12 to 50; Acts 7:2-8; Hebrews 11:8-27

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
 Here in our western world the pioneer is near to our life today. Great railroads cross the continent where the oxen-drawn covered wagon once toiled slowly, and broad splendid highways have now been added to the railroads. The automobile traveler can speed from coast to coast—or could when he could get gasoline—across the great plains and prairies, and through the passes, and even over the summits of the high mountains.
 It was my privilege to make the coast-to-coast auto trip three times, there and back, in four years; and I know how difficult it is, even with the best intentions, to visualize in the easy, and even luxurious conditions of today, the toils, and perils, and sacrifices, and hardships of the pioneers who went westward and conquered the west so recently as to be within the memory of many still living.
 Now the point I wish to make is that we are apt also to take the heritage of our religious faith and freedom for granted, without adequately realizing that here, too, pioneers have blazed the way, enduring, suffering and sacrificing in obedience to that inner urge that drove them forward, and in conscious purpose to fulfill their destiny in preparing the way for the generations that would follow them.
 The eleventh chapter of Hebrews reminds us of what the pioneers of faith have endured, and of how much we owe to them. To that chapter might be added the records of pioneers throughout the ages, for generation after generation has added to the honor of those who have suffered to preserve the faith or to extend the spiritual boundaries. Just at present we have reason to think of those pioneer missionaries who went a century and half a century ago to the islands of the Pacific, facing dangers from cannibalistic tribes, and otherwise enduring great privations and hardships.

 It might have looked at times as if the labors of these pioneer missionaries were in vain. But what a heritage there has been in these war years! American boys escaping from Jap savagery to the jungle, or cast up on an island beach, have found friendly natives, speaking the language of Christianity, and acting like Christians in the ministry of helpfulness and kindness.
 Abraham, father of the Jewish people, is the true type of the pioneer. He was a pioneer in the physical sense, going out not knowing whether he was going to find a new home and to establish a new lineage. But he was a spiritual pioneer as well, and undoubtedly the story of Abraham has inspired pioneers of later days. They have left their kinship with him, and the finest type of pioneer in our immediate history has carried the Bible with him along with the plow. As he has cast new furrows for his country, he has cast new furrows for God.
 God grant that we might all be such pioneers! For though the physical frontiers are closed, there are great spiritual frontiers to challenge the faith and courage of those who would follow in pioneer way.

Elgin Airman Is Back From Patrol Duty In Pacific

Walter T. Durham, 21, navy seaman first class, Elgin, Oregon, has returned from a tour of combat duty in the Pacific, where he served as tail gunner of a navy Liberator search plane in Patrol Bombing Squadron 102. Durham completed 43 combat missions.
 Sweeping the seas of the western Pacific ahead of and around our Fast Carrier Task Forces, his plane flew many 2,000-mile unescorted patrols to spot enemy shipping and aircraft, thus facilitating the navy's steady drive toward the Jap mainland.
 On one occasion, while pounding enemy shipping and shore installations in the Bonins, the plane was attacked by five Jap fighters. However, the machine-gun fire from the Liberator was so accurate the Japs eventually broke off the engagement and fled.
 On another search, the Liberator sighted a Jap Betty (twin-engine bomber) flying low over the water west of the Marianas. The navy plane closed the range, and after a brief skirmish, the Betty flamed, hit the waves and exploded.
 Durham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Durham of Elgin. Before entering the navy, he attended Elgin high school, where he was on the golf and basketball teams. His wife is the former Eva McMillion of Elgin.
