Isolation of Shuri Looms as Yanks Capture Yonabaru

The Japanese still are resisting bitterly.

Infantry killed 1,000 enemy troops in fierce hand-to-hand fighting.

Yonabaru lies at the southwest corner of Nakagusuku Bay, an excellent naval anchorage. The bay soon will be open to American shipping.

Four army and marine divisions tightened a pincers on Shuri, midway between Naha and Yonabaru. Operations there were slowed, however, by heavy rains and mud.

The entire advance along the coastal plains of the east coast was made possible by the 96th division's thorough mopping up of the ridges and hills south of Conical hill. Conical hill previously had given the Japanese a dominating view of the northern approaches to Yonabaru.

United States warships moved in to support the Yonabaru ground attack, although neither vessels nor shore-based artillery opened up until the drive was well under way.

E-Bond Quota Is Passed By Imbler War Loan Sales

Meantime, the men's groups of the committee are emphasizing the investment value of war bonds as a hedge against inflation and to set aside as a nest egg against the time when civilian goods of many wanted kinds, but not now available, will be back on the market.

They are urging especially that farmers who have savings earmarked for post-war investment in new buildings, machinery or other major improvements, put the money into war bonds.

They point out that should an emergency arise, the bonds can be converted into cash on short notice, meanwhile giving the government the use of the money for prosecuting the war against Japan.

From an investment point of view, the bonds also offer an attractive outlet for surplus cash. They point out, as every bond held until maturity will bring its owner interest amounting to 33 1/3 per cent of its initial cost.

Navy is "Investing"

The investment feature of war bonds is the subject of a statement issued today by Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of the U. S. naval forces in Europe, who said:

"The word 'invest' has several meanings. In one sense the word means to lay siege to — attack. In another, it means to lay out capital for permanent use. The navy, I am proud to say, is 'investing' in both sense. Today we are laying siege to, attacking, the enemy — with all our might.

"Today, also the American government is providing the opportunity, to all of us, for laying by our savings for productive use in the days to come.

"For the sake of our families, for the high sake of our country, we must continue to 'invest' and 'invest', attack and save, until the enemy is out, until the future is ours."

FIGHTER PLANE FIREPOWER

It has been disclosed that 13 American Thunderbolt fighter planes have a greater combined firepower than have all the guns in a German infantry regiment, while 13 American Aircobras have a firepower equal to all the anti-tank guns in a German infantry regiment.

Uncle Sam in No Hurry To Send Nazi Prisoners Of War Back to Reich

Prisoners of war will have to wait for transportation home—and they will have to earn their keep. Thousands are needed to alleviate manpower shortage on farms.

By S. BURTON HEATH WASHINGTON, (NEA) — Germany's unconditional surrender does not involve immediate repatriation for the three to four hundred thousand Nazi prisoners of war now in the United States. Many or most of them will remain behind American barbed wire for some time to come.

The Geneva convention, which controls the handling of such captives, provides that "the repatriation of prisoners shall be effected with the least possible delay after the conclusion of peace."

Army representatives decline to speculate on just how this will be applied, and content themselves with referring to Article 75 of the convention. But there is reason for believing that the timing of such repatriation will be done realistically, with the war against Japan in mind.

Fear Lawless

By far the largest proportion of our Nazi prisoners are still held in Europe. The sooner we turn them loose, the shorter the time we must feed them, and the less shipping we need divert to hauling supplies for them. Nor is there any advantage to us in feeding captured enemy soldiers 3000 calories a day while we require ex-enemy civilians to live on 1150 calories of their own supplies.

But we can not just open the stockade gates and let close to two millions of irresponsible ex-fighters wander footloose through the liberated countryside. A wave of lawlessness close to anarchy might result. The mere mechanics of taking prisoners back to Germany, and turning them loose with a minimum of disruption to our military government administration, involves considerable planning at time.

Meanwhile, the French and perhaps others would like to have the Nazis clean up mine fields and make the countryside safe for living, farming, traveling.

The number of Nazi prisoners in this country is in question. A of April 1 it was 311,630, with another 100,000 scheduled to be brought over because we need their services. For security reasons, until May figures are released, one can only guess that about one-fourth of that additional 100,000 already has arrived.

One consideration against immediate repatriation of these men is that we need their labor. Without deviating from the terms of the Geneva convention, we can hold them until enough GI's have been demobilized and enough war workers released to perform the important tasks the prisoners now are doing.

Even more important is shipping. Every vessel we possess is going to be very busy for some time from the city to the country.

Markets

Wall Street Reacts To Political News

NEW YORK, May 23 (UP)—Stocks declined fractions to more than a point in the main list today in slightly more active trading.

Wall street analysts attributed the sell-off largely to technical reasons, pointing out that a reaction has been overdue after the recent extended period of rising prices.

That it came today, these quarters indicated, was principally because of yesterday's action by Rep. Gearhart, R., Cal., in introducing a bill to permit a 30 per cent wage increase, and some uncertainty created by the government crisis in England.

Business and industrial news generally was favorable.

In the stock market such leaders as Santa Fe, Caterpillar tractor, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich, American Sugar Refining American Power & Light preferred and American & Foreign Power 2nd preferred were off a point or more. Du Pont lost more than 4 points, Hudson Motor dropped more than 2 and Pittsburgh Coal preferred declined around 3 points.

PORTLAND DAIRY

PORTLAND Ore., May 23 (UP)—Stocks of butter today were accumulating among dealers as production gained. Prices were unchanged.

A steady tone was noted in the egg market, with receipts holding up well and quality being maintained. Prices were unchanged.
