WASHINGTON, May 24 (UP)—The navy today announced the loss of a motor mine sweeper in the Philippines as a result of enemy action.

The YMS-481, which carried the normal complement of 30 men, suffered moderate personnel casualties, the navy said. Next of kin of casualties have been notified.

Skipper of the vessel was Lt. (jg) Theron O. Anglin, Wadley, Ga., who is reported wounded in action.

Loss of the motor mine sweeper brings to 309 the number of naval vessels lost from all causes in this war.

La Grande Girl Gets Music Scholarship

Miss Mary Jasper, 17-year-old La Grande pianist, has been awarded a piano scholarship to the conservatory of music at Whitman college at Walla Walla.

Miss Jasper, who has taken a prominent part in musical events in the community, participated in the annual Whitman competition for music scholarships and yesterday received notification of the award. The award was based on performance at the audition.

She is the daughter of Mrs. E. D. Jasper.

Promotion of Clarence V. Ingram of 2801 Spruce street to staff sergeant a short time before Germany's surrender is announced in a communication from U. S. Seventh army headquarters in Germany.

Ingram is a member of the 100th division which served through the drive from the Vosges mountains of France, through Alsace and climaxed its campaign with the capture of the fortress city of Bitsche.

A navy department message reveals that Donald Burns, seaman first class, of La Grande is a member of a battleship crew which took part in the pre-invasion bombardment of Okinawa. His ship, a veteran of World War I, also participated in five previous campaigns of the present war.

Some miles from our destination we had to switch off the jeep's lights and drive blind, lest Jap artillery observers on high ground get curious. From time to time we would use a dim flashlight to feel for the roadside.

When we reached camp it was so dark the driver could barely find our tent by following white lines stretched out along the ground. Some 155 mm. guns were blasting away nearby, and continued intermittently all night.

In the morning it developed there wouldn't be a whole lot to see after all this day. But Maj. Gen. Leonard F. Wing of Rutland, Vt., briefed us on his maps, there under the coffee and mango trees, and we decided the best bet was to look in on his 103rd regiment.

The regimental commanding officer turned out to be Col. Joseph P. Cleland of Omaha, who looks like a West Pointer and is one-class of '25. Colonel Cleland has white hair and mustache and I was surprised to learn he was only my age—43.

"I'm an old-looking young man," he said. The colonel looks not unlike a younger Fritz Kreisler.

Well, he took me and Russ Brines in his jeep, and we drove along a newly made road as far as the road went.

Then we walked. It was hot, and our path was just a trace flattened in 10-foot high "grass" by infantrymen who had moved up during the night to take another hill on the way to Ipo dam, which the Japs still held.

Philippine laborers, hired to carry water cans forward, were squatting by the dozens along the trail. The colonel would call out to them as we passed, "Let's get going with that water. The men are thirsty up there." Some of the carriers got to their feet all right, but others just stared.

Here and there we passed groups of soldiers resting briefly, some of them intently reading mail that had just been brought up. The colonel paused from time to time to ask a question or to issue an order.

Finally we reached the brow of a hill from which he wanted to look at his forward positions on a ridge beyond, occupied during the night with little resistance. I sat down and panted.

We retraced our steps through the towering grass. The colonel stopped to talk business with Capt. Don Lichteig of Wesley, Ia., executive officer of Cleland's second battalion, and according to the colonel a first-rate soldier.

We got back to camp, and by now a bulldozer had extended the road a little further through the virgin grass, but we headed back.

"Get that road scraper up here," the colonel told a soldier. "Tell him one good pass at this road will save it if it rains again."

We passed an MP, and the colonel told him to move on up to the end of the road and let the traffic move as far as it could go. He flagged a bulldozer and told the driver to doze a turnaround along the roadside to facilitate traffic.

Artillery was moving up now. There were other hills to be taken.

Willard McMurphy, seaman first class, who has been serving in the south Pacific seven and one-half months, is in La Grande on leave visiting his family. He will report at San Francisco for reassignment.

Lt. Leland Hall, son of Mrs. H. E. Churchill, will leave La Grande Saturday to report to Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Lieutenant Hall, a member of the infantry's Red Arrow division, served 38 months in the Pacific area, including Australia, New Guinea and the Philippines.

Pvt. Vern Peterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. U. Peterman, who served with the 41st infantry in the south Pacific, is in La Grande on furlough. Peterman has been serving as an athletic instructor in the air corps, and will report next Wednesday to Lemoore field, Calif.

Lee G. Miller Philippine Trek Is Exhausting, Mail Exhilarating

By LEE G. MILLER

MANILA (By Wireless)—I had returned to Manila about noon after two weeks at sea, ready for a little rest. Uh huh. By nightfall I was jumping through rain to the 43rd division which was fighting Japs only an hour's ride from Manila. Lieut. Bill Robinson talked me into it against my better judgment.

Some miles from our destination we had to switch off the jeep's lights and drive blind, lest Jap artillery observers on high ground get curious. From time to time we would use a dim flashlight to feel for the roadside.

When we reached camp it was so dark the driver could barely find our tent by following white lines stretched out along the ground. Some 155 mm. guns were blasting away nearby, and continued intermittently all night.

Weekly Casualty List Is Smaller

WASHINGTON, May 24 (UP)—Officially reported U. S. combat casualties edged close to 1,000,000 today with losses in all theaters totaling 996,089.

The new total was 9,875 more than a week ago, the smallest seven-day increase in many months.

The overall total included 886,525 army and 109,564 navy, marine corps and coast guard casualties. The army figure reflects actual fighting through the greater part of April, before the German surrender.

en an nobody was sure where the Japs might make a stand.

We stopped to look at a water plant being installed beside a shallow stream. Water would be pumped from the stream into a canvas tank and chlorinated. We passed a field kitchen. Soon men in the forward lines, now eating cold C rations, would get hot food again.

Finally we got back to the regimental command post and had lunch and the colonel told about stumbling onto a Jap recently and killing him with a pistol. And presently we drove back to Manila.

Well, it wasn't much of a war that day, but I find you don't have to be under fire to get wornout from noonday climbing in the Philippine sun.

When we got home I found a double handful of mail though, and my fatigue vanished.

Meeting and greeting returned combat heroes beset by personal difficulties or problems of adjustment often present situations which require tact, sympathy and understanding.

Anticipating the need, Dr. Carl R. Rogers, USO director of counseling services, has written a pamphlet giving helpful advice.

His pointers? (1) Don't give advice and don't talk too much. The important part of the art of helping is the practise of self-restraint.

(2) Try to understand the value of emotional release.

(3) Try to comprehend that the behavior of each individual has its understandable causes.

(4) Learn how to listen in an understanding fashion, and remember that you understand with your heart as well as with your mind.

They are rules which families and friends of veterans should follow as closely as do canteen workers.

Fruit, Vegetables Set Back By Weather

PORTLAND, May 24 (UP)—Grain, pastures, and alfalfa crops in most parts of Oregon have been improved by the rains of the past week, the U. S. department of commerce's crop bulletin said today.

Spraying of fruit trees and cultivation of vegetable crops have been delayed in many sections, and cold weather is reported to have delayed growth in some localities.
