Knowledge of Poisonous Plants Will Help You Enjoy Vacation

By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Writer

Vacation-bound? Save your skin the unhappy consequences that can come from a brush with poison ivy, sumac or oak by arming yourself with information as to what this triple-threat looks like and giving it a big, wide berth.

As good as detailed illustrations for identification are these descriptions of this poisonous trio supplied by New York City's department of health.

Watch for These

Poison ivy? Is a shrub or vine that twines around tree trunks or runs along old stone walls, has leaf-groups of three which change from a ripe green in the summer to a brilliant russet in the fall. It bears waxy white berries.

Poison sumac, like ivy, bears branches of white berries and its leaves turn scarlet in the fall, but foliage is characterized by rows of leaflets stemming in pairs from stalks sheathed with fine, non-sticky fuzz. This enemy usually lurks in low marshlands and swamps.

Poison oak grows in typical clusters of three leaves, resembling oak leaves, which sprout from shrub or vine that sometimes weaves its noxious way among branches of trees.

No Sure Protection

Warned that nothing has been formulated to keep you safe from these plants if their irritating sap touches your skin, a doctor cites expedients to use which may help to stave off a rash. The measures? Use three or four lathers of soap and particular diligence in scrubbing fingernails and skin between the fingers.

Other wise precautions to take, he says, are a shampoo to wash out any poison which may have reached your hair, and a bath followed by an alcohol rubdown.

If, in spite of all you do, skin reddens or develops blisters, the wise thing to do is to consult your doctor. You can give yourself temporary relief by bathing irritated areas in hot water or milk of magnesia, calamine lotion or a solution of epsom salts, using one tablespoonful to one cup of water. What you shouldn't use, he warns, are cold cream or ointment, which will only spread the poison.

Members of the jury were: Albert Brazille, of Cove, Mrs. Zilla Carlson, Summerville, Earl Sager, Elgin, Gus Fowler, Perry, Mrs. Frankie Baum, Urison, George Beem, Elgin, Raymond Wealty, Elgin, Wesley Street, Union John Allen, La Grande, Ruth Baker, Cove, Kenwick Clark, La Grande and Era French, Cove. Mrs. Edith M. Worley of La Grande was an alternate juror.

The prosecution was conducted by C. E. Eberhard, district attorney protem, and Henry Hess and S. H. Burleigh were defense counsel.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Linking of God With Man Is the Intelligent Basis of True Religion
Scripture: Genesis Chapters 1 and 2

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
"God saw everything that He had made, and behold, it was very good." This verse in Genesis 1:31 is an excellent keynote for this lesson.

are back of the universe. The world didn't just happen. "In the beginning, God." 2. That the creative process was a bringing of order out of chaos. Law and order are of the very essence of God's work and will for man.

If we could see creation as God saw it, we, too, would know that it is very good. We see it marred by what man has done, to himself, to his fellowmen, and even to the world in which he lives. With infinite capacity for building beautifully and well, he has been too often content to live in hovels, or to let others live there.

The Genesis writer, with magnificent vision, faith, and daring, links the Creator with man, made in the image and likeness of God, with the capacity of being himself a maker, or creator. "God made man in His own image."

There are problems associated with the ugly, and cruel, and evil things in the world. Tenyson wrote of "Nature red in tooth and claw," though he wrote, also, of the trust that "somehow good will be the final goal of ill!"

"Every house is builded by some man, but He that built all things is God." This linking of man with God is logical and sound, and it is the intelligent basis of all true religion. It is a commonplace of our faith today; but surely it was an inspired man who first perceived and uttered it.

That not one life shall be destroyed;
Or cast as rubbish to the void,
When God hath made the life complete."

When one thinks or speaks of the beauty of God's world, one does not know where to begin. First is the beauty of that order and law by which the universe is upheld—planets moving so truly in their orbit that astronomers can define every movement for years ahead. Next is the beauty of the moral law, the things that pertain to man's integrity and relationship to his fellowmen. And manifold is the beauty of man's environment—skies and clouds, the starry heavens, green fields, and gorgeous trees and flowers, vast oceans, and pure rippling brooks, the beauty that man himself has created in art and literature, and in all the works of his hands that mark his kinship with God.

However these things may be, this lesson bids us contemplate God's joy in creation, and the great and beautiful things that God has provided for man. Bitter controversies have raged around the Genesis story of creation, but we should not allow these to mar for us the beauty of this poem of creation, or to obscure in any way its essential truth, which is: 1. That mind, and purpose, and creative will
