SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Unselfish Acts of Abraham Serve as Example for Today's Peace Seekers

Scripture: Genesis, Chapters 13-15.

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Two stories of Abraham stand out from the crude and primitive times in which he lived, revealing such a high conception of human motives and action that they speak to our own times clearly. The problem of world peace and security might be said to be that of catching up with Abraham. The first story is of the strife between the men of Abraham and those of his kinsman, Lot, over pastures and watering places. That Abraham was no coward or appeaser was shown plainly a little later, but he was a man of great unselfishness, willing to sacrifice his own interests if peace could be maintained. In this spirit he said to Lot as they looked over the land, "You take the left and I will go to the right; or you go to the right and I will go to the left." "Let there be no strife between me and thee and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren."

choice; and that Abraham's unselfishness and love of peace were not impulses of the moment, but expressions of his settled character, was soon displayed in the second episode, when Lot got into trouble. "Lot pitched his tent toward Sodom," without for a moment thinking of the trouble he was getting into when he cast in his lot with that wicked city. The trouble began some time before the threat of destruction and Lot's flight from the city. In a war in which a number of kings were involved, the King of Sodom was defeated, and Lot was carried off a captive, and all his goods were seized. When word was brought to Abraham, he armed his trained servants to the number of over 300, pursued the kings who had gone off with the captives and the loot; and partly by courageous daring, partly by strategy, attacking by night, defeated and pursued them, recapturing not only Lot, but all the people they had carried off from Sodom, and all the goods. The man of peace could be a terrific fighter if he was forced to fight—just as men of peace have been the most terrible and efficient fighters of today. Then happened a great and wonderful thing, full of meaning for a world seeking peace today. The King of Sodom was grateful. He said to Abraham, "Give me the persons, and take the goods to thyself." But Abraham refused to accept as much as a shoelatchet, except only what his warriors had eaten or spent in their campaign. What a world this might be, if every individual and every nation concerned with the establishment of peace on earth were to say, both in words and in effect: "I want nothing for myself; I care only that all may get their just rights, and that what is best for all may be attained." It is selfishness on the part of individuals and nations that is most likely to defeat plans for peace. That is why the world needs to catch up with Abraham.

Vatican Declares Not Anti-Russian, Seeking 'Freedom'

VATICAN CITY, July 21 (UP)—A high Vatican source said today the Vatican is not pursuing an anti-Russian policy but only desires a minimum of religious liberty and permission for Catholic clergymen to communicate freely with the Holy See. These quarters said it appeared Russia is willing to agree to the religious liberty minimum but it "lukewarm" on the subject of free communications with the pope. This, it was said, stems from a Russian belief the Vatican is its political adversary. The Vatican source said this Russian belief was behind recent attacks on the Vatican by the Soviet press and radio. Other Vatican quarters, however, regarded the attacks as more in the nature of trial balloons. The Vatican is now carrying on intense diplomatic activity designed to dissipate Soviet fears of the church's political intentions. The Holy See will soon publish a statement disclaiming intentions of backing the restoration of old regimes such as that of the Hapsburgs in Austria. Negotiations are now underway to resume diplomatic relations with Czechoslovakia.

Tricks 'Change' Shape of Nose

By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Writer
The nose that strays from the path of beauty in length or size causes a lot of girls to ask "what to do?" So what-to-do to snip off apparent length would be to wear a bang, kept level with eyebrows and to avoid a center hairpart. Pitfalls of dress to be shunned like the plague are pointed necklines and hats that come forward into any kind of peak. To make a bulbous nose look smaller, you can use two shades of powder, applying the darker tone to the sides to reduce apparent width. Building your hair out from the brow with a pouf of soft curls and creating an opposing line at the back of your head with a chignon or a braid, looped up and tied peruke-fashion, are other tricks for minimizing the size of a nose. Wear hats with trick brims run out from the brow. Gimmicks that will always focus attention away from a nose that you don't like are eye make-up and bright lipstick—using the latter to make your lips wider rather than full.

MEMO TO ADVERTISERS

How you can be in a lot of places . . . at one time

If you could make regular, personal calls on your best customers and prospects and talk to them about your merchandise and service, that would be the most effective kind of selling.

Of course that is not possible but you can give a friendly, newsy talk about your business to the best families in our community through the advertising columns of this newspaper. You can describe your merchandise or service, quote prices and sell to a lot of people at one time.

But you wouldn't make a lot of personal calls at random, would you? It's just as important that you know where your advertising goes. That's the reason this newspaper is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, so we can give you audited facts and figures about our circulation—where, how much, how obtained, how much people pay for this paper and other essential information that you should know and have a right to know when you make an investment in advertising.

The Bureau is a cooperative association of 2000 publishers, advertising agencies and advertisers in the United States and Canada. Organized in 1914, its purpose is to furnish advertisers with verified information about the circulation of its publisher members.

The Bureau maintains a large staff of trained auditors who make an annual audit of the circulation records of each A.B.C. publication. With the facts thus obtained, published in A.B.C. reports, it becomes possible for advertisers to select media and buy space on the basis of known and verified circulation values.
