New Subsidy Will Aid Production Of Lambs, Sheep

WASHINGTON, July 27 (UP)—Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson announced today details of a new subsidy program designed to encourage production and feeding of lambs and sheep.

Payments will range from $1.50 to $3.15 a 100 pounds on lambs weighing more than 65 pounds and will be a flat $1 on all other lambs and sheep. The program was authorized under the O'Mahoney bill passed last week by congress.

The department said the public eventually will benefit by an increased supply of lamb meat, but warned the increase will not be immediate because of the time involved in fattening and producing the animals.

It reported because of high cost and decreasing profits sheep-growers have been selling flocks and getting out of business. The number of stock sheep has declined from 50,000,000 to about 41,000,000 in the last three years. The variation in payments is intended to increase the returns from heavier lambs and the largest subsidy will be paid during the season "fed" lambs are normally marketed.
