Funeral Services Not Arranged For Nina Lane Faubion

EUGENE, Aug. 9 (UP)—No formal funeral services were arranged today, in compliance with her final request, for Mrs. Nina Lane Faubion, 81-year-old Oregon journalist, historian, painter, archeologist and political figure, who died Monday in Eugene.

Her death recalled many of Oregon's historic events, for she was a granddaughter of Gen. Joseph Lane, first territorial governor of the Oregon territory; daughter of Harry Lane, former Portland mayor and one of the state's most famous United States senators; wife of logging contractor David P. Faubion, a member of a pioneer family; and active in public life four decades.

Although she had been in ill health, she was preparing a biography of her grandfather for New York publishers.

In the election of 1912, she ran against her father for the Oregon state legislature, contending he should be in the United States senate "and not wasting his time at Salem." He was elected to the United States senate two years later.

She was one of his secretaries and his close associate when he was one of six senators to vote against American participation in World War I.
