Outlook Good For Valley In Post War Years

lumber remanufacture in La Grande and in Elgin. The Mt. Emily Lumber company here has completed and in operation a new plant which has 18,000 square feet of space. This has been put into use in the last two years. The company expects to continue attention to the manufacturing side.

The manufacturing of lumber into other products here will mean less raw lumber will be shipped per unit of income and per unit of labor, which in turn means more persons employed and larger payrolls.

The Pondosa Lumber and Lumber company at Elgin also has plans to increase its employment. It expects to go into post war production as soon as possible in its entirely remanufacturing plant.

Breathing Space

M. G. Breuner, assistant superintendent of this division of the Union Pacific Railroad company, declared the railroads expect peace or no peace, to handle an unusually heavy volume for the next few weeks. Then, he said, they may be a short breathing space, or what passes for a breathing space in these hectic times.

The railroad, he said, can lose a third of the business it is now doing and still not have to lay off a man, because most of the men are doing about that much over load in their work now.

After the "breathing spell," in which the situation will drop more nearly to normal, he and other railroaders expect to start moving an unusually heavy tonnage of reconversion materials.

Remodeling

As for the building and contracting work, already several business houses in La Grande have started remodeling and many others are expected to follow suit. New building on a large scale may be in the offing.

For instance, a specific post war program which is of interest to a large part of the state is the highway program.

School Expansion

Already planned are expansions of the school system here, for which a five mill tax is now in its second year and has raised $120,000 as a nucleus for school development in the La Grande district. Several consolidations of schools in the county will also necessitate construction of new buildings.

Eastern Oregon college of education also has a building program which includes certainly a new library building and tentatively a men's dormitory. Both of these will mean many jobs for many men over varying periods of time.

In addition, the city is planning extension of its sewage and water system and construction of an incinerator.

Besides this, there is already available the nucleus of a fund for a swimming pool somewhere in the city.

Complete modernization of its plant and extension of its lines is in the agenda for the West Coast Telephone company. The Eastern Oregon Light and Power company also contemplates and has plans for extension and modernization of its facilities throughout.

Agriculture in the valley has already increased its diversification during the war time, notably in peas and in seed grasses. The wheat, fruit, hay and ranching of the valley can also be increased.

Definite possibility of irrigation is also seen, a report of which is about to be made public. Irrigation would provide unlimited capacity for diversification, would permit smaller farm units and intensive operations and increase the number of farms in the valley.

YANKS ON GUAM WELCOME NEWS—Thrilled Yanks at advanced headquarters, Guam, express their approval of Japan's surrender offer in typical G. I. style as they crowd around radio to hear most welcome news since war began, exuberantly display premature sign proclaiming end of war.

atomic bomb, dropped for the first time only nine days before, was "new and most cruel."

The emperor spoke over the Japanese broadcasting corporation network at noon Tokyo time (8 p. m. Tuesday PWT). It was the first time, with the exception of a few government and military officials and members of the royal family, that any Japanese had heard the voice of the emperor.

Dispatches from Guam said captured Japanese officers who listened to the broadcast on Okinawa believed there was no doubt the emperor made the broadcast in person.

FIRST OF EXPECTED WAVE OF SUICIDES

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15 (UP)—The Japanese cabinet resigned today and one member already has committed hara-kiri in the first of what may become a wave of suicides among Japan's beaten war lords.

The official Japanese Domei news agency said war minister Gen. Korechika Anami, 58, took his life at his official residence to "atone for his failure."

Domei said Premier Kantaro Suzuki tendered the resignation of his cabinet. Japan's surrender required a new cabinet of men "with fresh ideas," Tokyo said.

Suzuki presented the resignations personally to the emperor. Hirohito accepted the resignations, but asked Suzuki to remain in office.

Disclosure of Anami's suicide touched off speculation that other members of the Suzuki and past cabinets similarly would "atone for their failure" to win the war.

Another former premier, Gen. Hideki Tojo, one of the chief instigators of the Pearl Harbor attack also may choose suicide. Tojo is expected to be named by the allies among Japan's leading war criminals.

Domei gave no details of Anami's suicide, but there seemed little doubt that he followed the ancient custom of plunging a dagger into the left side of his stomach, drawing it to the right and turning it upward.

Tradition calls for an official second simultaneously to behead the victim with a sword.

This in turn could make an increase in farm employment and a consequent increase in the accessory industries and supply businesses in the cities and towns.

Flag-raising at Liuchow, China, typifies the descent of the Rising Sun. This city was recaptured 11 July by American trained and equipped Chinese troops. Now both Chinese and American flags proudly fly above many of the cities once seized by Japs.
