Truman Says 'All To Blame' for Pearl Harbor

til the time of the reports yesterday had been the most frequently blamed armed service commanders, want trials.

The president said he had no objection to their side of the story being told, and agreed with a reporter's suggestion Short and Kimmel could make statements without going through courts martial.

The president took sharp issue with Rep. Andrew J. May, D., Ky., chairman of the house military affairs committee, who expressed fear the army and navy reports on Pearl Harbor might constitute a "white wash."

It was the first time any soil from the mess of Pearl Harbor had been rubbed officially on Hull, Marshall and Admiral Stark.

In no part of the official story was any blame directly attached to the late President Roosevelt. It seemed evident, however, Hull's major decisions bore Roosevelt's approval.

In demanding trials, May said he wanted to establish who, through possible "criminal neglect," was to blame for the bloodshed and the ships and planes lost at Pearl Harbor.

Left Out Rep. Dewey Short, R., Mo., a member of the house military committee, who long has demanded that Kimmel and General Short be given a chance to stand open trial, said now that Marshall and Stark have been accused, they, too, "should be given their day in court."

Short and some others suggested the official reports might have left out some important details.

Apotrops of the defense of Marshall by Stimson and Truman, Rep. Short asked whether the staff chief was now being protected or shielded.

"The full searchlight," Representative Short said, "has not yet been turned on the deep, dark mysteries and secret of the Pearl Harbor catastrophe."

Rep. Paul W. Shafer, R., Mich., said Kimmel and Gen. Short should be tried and "exonerated if they are found not guilty."

"Those who are responsible," Shafer said, "should be punished."

Results of Autopsy Of Girl Not Revealed

VICTORIA, Aug. 30 (UP)—Police and coroner's deputies today refused to reveal the results of an autopsy on the body of Phyllis Stroud, 18, whose body was found Tuesday beneath four feet of sawdust in the basement of her home.

An inquest was scheduled for today into the mysterious death of the pretty brunette, who disappeared from a downtown Victoria street corner during a riotous V-J day celebration about midnight Aug. 15.

MacArthur in High Humor on Reaching Japan

By WILLIAM B. DICKINSON

ATSUGI, Japan, Aug. 30 (UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur stepped from his C-54 transport plane, Bataan, onto the imperial soil of Japan today with the words:

"Well, we got here, didn't we?"

MacArthur was in high good humor as he stepped from his plane exactly on schedule time.

"The preliminary occupation is going splendidly," MacArthur said. "There is every indication it will continue without friction or bloodshed."

The supreme commander felw up from Okinawa in bright sunshine through a calm blue sky flecked with white clouds.

A crowd of photographers surrounded MacArthur as he stepped from the plane, among them a Japanese cameraman. The Americans pushed the Japanese back out of camera range.

MacArthur laughed and told the Americans they would have to get their Japanese competitor to capitulate.

Lt. Gen. Robert Eichelberger, commander of the eighth army, greeted MacArthur.

For the first time in the war MacArthur was accompanied in the same plane by Lt. Gen. Richard Sutherland, his chief of staff. Others were Brig. Gen. Bonner Fellers and Charley Whitney, and Col. Roger Egeberg, his aide.</
