Erring Man Who Heeds Conscience, Like Judah, Is Sure to Mend Ways

Scripture: Genesis 42-44

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Judah was a man with a noble, a man who when events of his life occurred, it was he who, more than anyone else, was responsible for Joseph being in Egypt. Reuben, it may be recalled, had persuaded his brethren to cast Joseph into a pit, when the brothers were conspiring to kill him, intending to go back and rescue Joseph and deliver him to his father. But before this could happen, a caravan of Ishmaelites came into sight, and Judah suggested that they sell Joseph to them—the first step of his going to Egypt. Later Judah was mixed up in a nasty affair with his daughter-in-law, the story of which is in Genesis 38.
In both of these affairs, he seems to have displayed a well-intentioned, but muddled moral sense. He suggested selling Joseph, instead of killing him, because he was "our brother and our flesh." It isn't quite a brotherly act to sell one's own kin into slavery, but at that it was better than murder. When he suspected his daughter-in-law of sin, he ordered that she should be burnt to death, but when his own part in the affair was brought home to him, he acknowledged his sin with frank honesty, and did what he could to atone for the wrong.
Judah was a man, like many others, with a great capacity for good or evil. The seeds of good were in him, and now in the testing time of a great opportunity, they were bearing fruit. Where he had formerly been willing to

The La Grande Evening Observer, La Grande, Oregon.
Dear Editor:

I have closely followed the splendid publicity your paper has given the proposal that an enclosed all-year swimming pool be constructed as La Grande's Living War Memorial. Opinions of individuals so far quoted appear to be favorable to that proposal, in considerable majority. So too am I.

There are one or two thoughts in connection with location and operation of such a project which have not yet been expressed, which I believe should be seriously considered.

Location of the enclosed all-year swimming pool should be adjacent to, or at the high school. The advantages of central location in the community, easy availability to high school and college students, possibility of utilizing a part of the present, or an enlarged, high school heating plant, and convenience to instructors who will have charge of at least a portion of the swimming classes in conjunction with the general athletic program, are advantages which in my opinion outweigh any possible advantages of location elsewhere.

It should be made a matter of definite written agreement, however, that if the pool is located at or near the high school, and if school personnel have charge in any degree, that the pool be operated on Sundays and holidays, as well as other times, and that everyone in the community—school children, college students, and adults—shall have access to the pool's facilities. It should be understood that the community

Towel Pad Aids Perfect Press

By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Writer

It's the little expert tricks of Pressing clothes that often swing the scale of balance between looking passably nice and bandbox perfect.

Take sleeves, for instance, particularly the bolstered, jutting and shoulder-puffed fashions that are on their way in. To smoothly guide an iron over them, use a sleeve board. To make one, roll a heavy magazine up in a towel and insert it in the sleeve that you press.

Woolen duds pressed come off the board lint-free, if you'll use a woolen pressing cloth. Unless you press dark "silks" on the wrong side, there is more than apt to be a mirror-shine to tempt you for your amateur status as a presser.

Lapels or pockets come off the board looking more professionally pressed if you'll pave the way for your iron by inserting heavy paper for padding.

● MEMO TO ADVERTISERS

For the information of our advertisers, A. B. C. auditors make a complete, annual audit of our circulation.

AUDITED DISTRIBUTION for your Advertising

Good advertising copy and attractive layouts are, of course, essential to the success of your advertising. But from the standpoint of final results the answer depends upon the distribution of your advertising.

When you buy newspaper advertising you are paying for an opportunity to talk to people about your merchandise and service. What you get for your money, therefore, depends upon how many people there are in your audience, where they are, how this audience was obtained, and many other facts that indicate the value of the circulation as a market for what you have to sell.

In order that our advertisers may have this information and thus be able to invest in advertising space in this newspaper on the basis of known, verified facts, we are members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

The Bureau is a national, cooperative association of publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. Every year one of the trained auditors employed by the Bureau makes an audit of our circulation records. This audited information is issued in official A. B. C. reports covering each member publication. You avoid guesswork and speculation when you advertise in an A. B. C. newspaper.
