

Grind Bar Soap To Save Time in Work in Laundry

An unusual piece of equipment you're likely to find in the home laundry these days is the meat grinder, says Miss Doris McWhorter, Union county home demonstration agent.

To forestall the quip, "So that's what happened to my good shirt—the grinder ate it up," she says, the meat grinder's there for a good purpose. It's used to convert bar soap into soap powder. "Most of us have been able to get bars of laundry soap," says Miss McWhorter, "even when we have been unable to find soap flakes on the market. And, as every home-laundress knows, a bar of soap dissolves more quickly if it's shaved, grated, or pulverized before it's used. It's no trick at all to make soap powder. Just be sure the soap is well crumbled. Cut it into pieces and run it through the grinder. Let it dry well, then pulverize."

Homemakers who can conscientiously use two hands for a job instead of one can cut the time needed for going through simple tasks as washing spinach, cleaning woodwork, dusting or putting away dishes, say home extension specialists.

Time and motion studies that did so much to speed up work in war industries apply just as well to work around a home. This has been proven both by individual experiences and by definite studies.

Investigators found the average housewife used one pan in a single sink to wash spinach, using one hand to lift the greens from water to a colander, then back into fresh water. They found that this job could be done as well, and in less than half the time, by using two pans or a double sink, filling them alternately with water, and using both hands to draw and drain off water and lift the greens.

Other jobs where two hands save time are: washing woodwork—start with right hand, dry immediately with left hand, keeping drying cloth handy in left pocket; dusting—use two cloths, one in each hand, or wear a dust mitt on each hand.

Two Members of Cove Family Wed

COVE, Sept. 19 (Special)—Two members of the Herryford family, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Herryford, have recently been married. Mrs. Hazel Cochrane of Los Angeles, and Rufus Herryford were married at Longview, Wash., Sept. 4 in a quiet ceremony with Mr. and Mrs. Jay Marten as witnesses. They are living in Cove.

Visit Parishes
 Rt. Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Remington are making their last visits to the several parishes and missions that have been in his charge in the district. They visited Cove Sunday afternoon, with service at Ascension Episcopal church. They have done much wonderful work all over the district. In Cove they will have a lasting memory in the summer school for church workers that they established. The property here having been a gift from S. G. French in the long ago. He gave the school grounds for a girls school and the money to build the church. When the Remingtons came west 23 years ago, they took what was here for them, and established the "summer school for church workers" as that was nearest to the bequest.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Comstock left Saturday for Cherry Point, N. C., where he had to report for further instructions.

"Furs of Distinction"

Can You Afford to Postpone the Purchase of a New Fur Coat?

HERE ARE THE PLAIN FACTS

 The ceiling price on the majority of furs is "Off." Present wholesale purchases show a definite increase in the price of skins, an increase that must be reflected in the cost of finished garments. Prices will be no lower, may even increase, so it's foolhardy to put off the purchase of a new fur coat in anticipation of lower prices, when you can buy a Carlson "Fur of Distinction" at the present modest prices. Every garment shown in this display bears the war-time ceiling price or lower.
