

Shirley Temple on Honeymoon

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 20 (UP)—Shirley Temple, world's favorite baby star, knew what it meant today to be a war bride — even though the war was over. She had only seven days to be with Sgt. John Agar, jr., whom she married last night.

And where they were honeymooning was anybody's guess.

Agar, 24-year-old army air forces physical training instructor and son of the late Chicago packer, must report to a Utah camp for overseas assignment in just one week. His 17-year-old bride will be back to her parents and to work on a new picture, "Suddenly It's Spring."

Your GI Rights Problems of Men In Service

By DOUGLAS LARSEN NEA Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON Sept. 20—Here are some general questions from newly returned veterans and their relatives:

Q. I have been in the army two years and just returned from Europe. I expect to be back in civilian clothes very soon and have a job promised me with the city where I live. To get this job, however, I just discovered I have to be a registered voter in the city. Although I have lived in the United States many years I was not an American citizen before I went into the army. They tell me I have to produce citizenship papers to become a registered voter. I say that being in the U. S. army makes me a citizen automatically. Is this right?

A. No. Being in the U. S. army does not automatically make you an American citizen. There are several very simple procedures, however, by which you can get citizenship as a result of having been in the service.

Q. I have just come back from overseas and after looking around am afraid there isn't much chance of getting a job without a lot of training. Just what will the government do for me in the way of this so-called "vocational rehabilitation?" I was wounded and partly disabled.

A. You can receive up to four years' training in any field that you select in order to make yourself fit for any job which will support you.

Q. I have been discharged from the army and am working at my old job. Somehow things seem different. I think I might want to go to school or get some other training for a different job. How long do I have to get into this government training?

A. The law provides that no training course may extend beyond the expiration of six years after the end of the war. A vet must enter the course soon enough so that he can finish it before the six-year period is up.

Q. Do you get a vacation while getting vocational rehabilitation?

A. Yes. You can get up to 30 days a year.

Wheeler Asks Freight Probe

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, d. Mont., of the senate interstate commerce committee, today asked the interstate commerce commission to investigate the class freight rate structure in the mountain and Pacific coast states.

In a letter to ICC Chairman John L. Rogers, Wheeler pointed out that because of the present class rates in the area it is "extremely difficult, if not impossible, to establish manufacturing enterprises near the production of the raw materials."

Wheeler asked that the ICC expand its present study of southern rates to take in the western area.
