Paris Fashion Makes A Dame Look Like One

By GAY PAULEY
United Press International

PARIS (UPI) — Paris fashion designers this year have made a dame look like what she is, a dame.

That's what it all boils down to, when you review the highlights of the fall and winter collections from the designers who finished their Paris showings this week.

They replaced the sack with curves, left legs on display and brought back the waistline, although most of them raised it from its normal anatomical location.

Two designers pulled a couple of big surprises. The House of Dior dropped hemlines 14 to 15 inches from the floor, well below what most other designers showed.

And Balenciaga, rated by a lot of fashion critics as one of Paris' "greats," clung to the chemise-style silhouette. That is what the buyers reported after this show: reporters won't get a peek until later this month.

Most of the accent on curves is at the bust and neckline.

Not to be overlooked in all the hemline-waistline talk, is the news in fabrics. For daytime their bulk is outstanding — tweeds which look an inch thick; lacy, airy mohairs; textured wools of all kinds. Most patterns are small and subtle: I could count on one hand the big splashy plaids in the collections.

Fabrics for evening are so extravagant it would take a sultan to afford some of the dresses. They include heavy silk crepes, satins, brocades, cut velvets, printed failles, and chiffon. Not satisfied with the lushness of fabric itself, designers enrust them all over with many colored gems.

Dior stressed black as the most important color for the new season, and it was a heavy favorite with other designers. But, throughout there was a generous sprinkling of all the reds and pinks, the mauve and purple tones, many blues and some greens and browns.

Unless your help is needed, concentrate on your own driving when you pass by the scene of an accident. Stopping unnecessarily, slowing to a crawl or having your attention distracted only adds to the hazard and ties up traffic, especially on high speed freeways.
