Rose Coakley Built Career 'Throwing Light On Subject'

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Rose Coakley has built an unusual career on a cliché—throwing light on the subject.

A consultant on home, office and industrial lighting, she has helped to light up the homes of Arthur Godfrey and Fats Domino. She has done "mood" lighting for music rooms and once as an experiment illuminated a New York apartment with nothing but colored bulbs for a former employer.

"One of the troubles with this world, there's not enough light in it," said Miss Coakley. She was in New York on business for her present boss, Thomas Industries, Inc., of Louisville, Ky., which claims to be the world's largest maker of light fixtures.

"A good lighting plan for the home is just as important as the plumbing," she said. "It has to be worked out as the architect works."

"But I saw a $100,000 house the other day. Brand new. It had only 13 outlets for fixtures. No lights in the closets. Only one in the kitchen."

"More Fixtures Needed" Today's typical home...three bedrooms, 13,000 cubic feet of space...has an average of 12.2 fixtures," she continued. "It takes at least 25 to do an adequate lighting job."

"Aren't you trying to run up our electric bills?" I asked her. "Not at all," she countered. "I'm just trying to keep people from stumbling in the dark. Proper lighting is a big factor in the warmth and comfort of a home, in the welcome it extends to visitors."
