

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Spring is with us, and I wish you'd say a word about the way some women dress in warm weather when they go marketing.

My husband is a butcher in a supermarket. He describes to me the way some women are dressed (or should I say undressed) and it's shocking.

Can you imagine a housewife appearing in a market barefoot? Well, they do come in this way, as well as in bathing suits, short-skirted shorts, low-cut blouses, and halter tops held up by a string. They wear clinging treader pants made of elastic, tight slacks and sloppy blue jeans that belong to their teenagers.

Please, Ann, remind these housewives that they have an obligation to people who must look at them when they appear in public.—The Butcher's Wife.

Dear Butcher's Wife: I've said it before, but since Spring is here, perhaps I should say it again: Fathing suits and shorts are for the beach. Elastic treader pants and blue jeans are for teenagers. Slacks with standing room only and atomic blouses (30 per cent fallout) are for the birds.

Dear Ann: We've been married six months and my husband has ambled away his last five pay checks. He must support his mother and pay alimony to his former wife. It turns out that I am stuck with his responsibilities.

I carry my lunch to work because there isn't an extra penny to spare. When a woman makes $100 a week and can't even buy lunches in a restaurant it's pretty sad, isn't it?

I knew he liked to gamble before I married him, but he promised to quit. When we were going together he stayed away from the track and the bookies for three months. Then he got a hot tip, won a little money and started in again.

Last night when he came home without his check he was drunk and put his fist through the dressing table mirror. He said I'd be better off without him, and one day he'd jump out the window. I'm worried sick. What can I do?—Alberta.

Dear Alberta: You can see that he goes to a doctor. The rest he must do for himself.

A man who repeatedly throws his paycheck away is out of touch with reality. When he realizes his "dream" has turned to ashes, he gets despondent and death looks like a peaceful solution. Uncontrolled gambling is a sickness. Urge him to get professional advice. If he refuses to help himself, leave.

To learn the knack of feeling comfortable with the opposite sex, send for Ann Landers' booklet "How To Be Date Bait," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope. (Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Mrs. Fred Sommer presided over the meeting. The following officers were elected to serve for the new year, to start July 1. Mrs. Fred Sommer, president; Mrs. E. E. Eddy, vice president; Mrs. J. L. Sinden, treasurer; and Mrs. J. C. Camp, secretary.

The club voted to make some repairs to the floors in the clubhouse in the near future.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Otis Palmer and Mrs. Lynn Hill. The centerpiece carried out the color scheme of orchid and white in the use of lilies of the valley and iris, on a lace covered table.
